Military Committee Favors 100 Mil- lion for Purpose 4-YEAR PLAN

Would Have Board Des- ignate Strategic Raw Materials

Washington—(P)—The senate military committee approved unanimously today a bill by Senator Thomas (D-Utah) authorizing expenditure of $100,000,000 during the next four years for the acquisition of strategic raw materials, many of which must be imported by this country.

Senator Thomas said a board, consisting of the secretaries of war, navy, interior and state, would be authorized to designate the strategic materials and would be empowered to encourage the development of substitutes for them.

An authorization for a $500,000 expenditure during the next four years, $350,000 by the bureau of mines and $150,000 by the geological survey, also was included to finance the development of raw materials in this country.

Although the measure was not included in the administration's rearmament program, Thomas said it was allied closely with it.

"World conditions make this bill very, very timely," Thomas said. "Smaller measures are pending in the house."

3 Facing Trial for Cashing Alleged Fraudulent Checks

Additional Arrests are Expected. Beloit Po- lice Declare

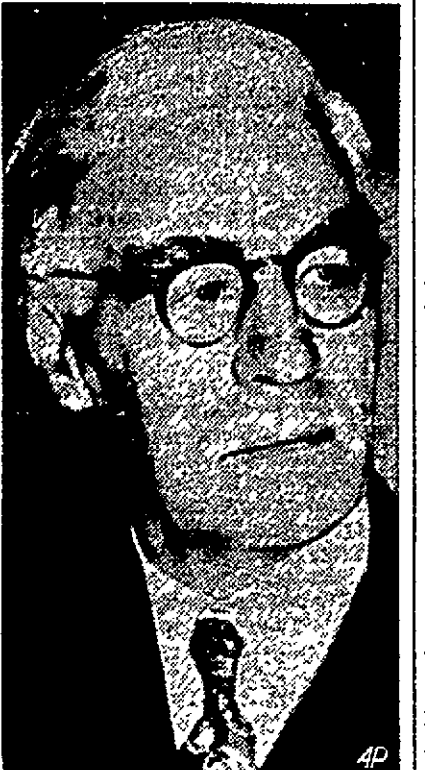

Beloit—(P)—Three men, alleged members of a ring that passed between 200 and 300 fraudulent checks here in the last several years, were arraigned in municipal court today and ordered to trial on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Andrew J. Finley, 49, local tavern operator and beer wholesaler, and Elmer Lee Yeager, 55, of Winona, Minn., pleaded innocent to charges of fraudulently obtaining $5,700 and $5,000, respectively. Trial dates for both were set for March 1, and bonds were fixed at $3,500 and $5,000.

The third man, Joseph C. Ralph, a farmer living near Beloit, pleaded guilty to falsifying $500. Date for his trial was not set.

District Attorney John Matheson said he believed a large number were operating in the check ring. Police said they expected to make additional arrests.

The checks were drawn for amounts ranging from $10 to $50 on the Second National bank.

Denounces Nazis

Participants in the German-American Bund meeting in New York were denounced as "traitors" to the United States in a fiery attack on the floor of the house of representatives by Congressman John A. Martin (above), of Colorado. "God save America from Nazi Christianity," shouted Martin. "Shades of Washington, must such things be tolerated in the name of liberty on the free soil of America?"

District Attorney John Matheson said he believed a large number were operating in the check ring. Police said they expected to make additional arrests.

The checks were drawn for amounts ranging from $10 to $50 on the Second National bank.

Police Detective Herbert Schultz said that between three to ten checks were passed a week, all drawn on the Merrick Dairy company where Yeager formerly was employed.

He charged that Yeager, a receiver at the dairy, made out false delivery slips for cream shipments, and that when checks were issued by the dairy company in payment, Ralph would collect them under various aliases.

Ralph then would turn the checks over to Finley who would cash them or have them cashed, Schultz said.

Other developments: Chairman Arthur J. Altmyer said the social security board had endorsed a proposed permanent relief program calling for increased unemployment compensation and the establishment of a new department of public works.

Cut Is Voted In Funds for 2 Departments

Nearly 28 Million Slashed From Roosevelt's Estimates

SECURITY CASH HIT

Total Provided Still 197 Million Greater Than For Current Year

Washington—(P)—The house appropriations committee, which started an economy drive this year by whittling down President Roosevelt's relief proposal, continued the campaign today by lopping $27,926,138 off his estimates for the treasury and post office departments.

The committee recommended $1,700,471,354 to operate both departments for the year starting July 1. Despite the reduction, the total was $197,029,280 greater than the sum provided for the current year.

Most of the savings was accomplished by cutting $20,000,000 off the $600,000,000 requested for the social security old-age reserve fund. The committee explained the reduction was attributable to "what we regard as an excessive estimate of the amount of receipts from taxes to be realized during the next fiscal year."

Of the total in the bill, $909,826,670 was earmarked for the treasury and $790,644,684 for the post office department.

Ask Official for Deportation Data

Houghteling Questioned About Labor Depart- ment's Records

Washington—(P)—The house judiciary committee, resuming consideration of a resolution asking for Secretary Perkins' impeachment, questioned James L. Houghteling, immigration commissioner, closely today about the labor department's record in deportation proceedings.

Congressman Graham (R-Pa.), among others, asked for information which might help the committee determine, he said, whether the department moved as slowly in the average deportation case as it has done in regard to Harry Bridges, CIO west coast maritime leader.

The discussion was held behind closed doors but it was learned the committee did not take up a motion by Congressman Celler (D-N.Y.) to dismiss the impeachment charges against Miss Perkins, Houghteling and Gerard D. Reilly, department solicitor.

Congressman Thomas (R-N.J.) has accused the three of high crimes and misdemeanors for failing to proceed with deportation proceedings against Bridges.

Girl Burns to Death In Farmhouse Tragedy

Phillips, Wis.—(P)—Fifteen-year-old Esther Tenet, a sophomore at Phillips High school, was burned to death when fire destroyed the Tenet farm home near here last night. An attempt to rescue the girl, who was sleeping in an upstairs bedroom, failed.

Sergeant Morrison said Pentell told him that Karas fired two shots at him as he fled and that both bullets passed through his overcoat.

RAPS INJUSTICES

Philadelphia—(P)—James V. Bennett (above), director of the United States Bureau of Prisons, declared today there was "one system of justice for the rich and another for the poor."

In an address for a citizens committee bent on improving the house of detention, he declared it was a "crime to confine to use the jail for the unfired prisoner."

"A well-to-do person suspected of having committed a crime can obtain bail, pay a fine, or be released on his personal bond, but the man without friends or funds is thrown in jail until his case can be reached."

Dewey Lashes at Hines in Review Of State's Case

Calls Him 'Corrupt Poli- tician' and 'Traitor To Democracy'

New York—(P)—District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey today denounced James J. Hines as a "corrupt politician" as he reviewed the state's case against the Tammany district leader and asked for his conviction on policy racket conspiracy charges.

Dewey struck back at the defense contention that Hines was the victim of a "frame-up" at the hands of the policy mob he is charged with protecting and told the jury that Hines was "a traitor to democracy."

The prosecutor held that Lloyd Paul Stryker, Hines' lawyer, had tried to create the impression that "a corrupt politician accused of protecting criminals" was a symbol of democracy and a part in the fight to preserve that democracy.

"That I resent as a dirty business," Dewey said. "That was a willful and a filthy attempt to arouse pity for an essential traitor to democracy."

The district attorney scoffed at what he termed Stryker's "emotional appeal" for an acquittal.

"The defense summation," said Dewey, "has been a fantastic phantasmagory of fiction, because there were no facts."

Primary Draws 125 Aspirants For City Posts

74 Men Seek 18 City Council Jobs; 8 Run For School Board

ELECTION MARCH 14

43 Candidates Running For Nomination to County Board

A real free-for-all election in which 125 candidates will compete for nomination to 39 city council, county board and school board posts, will be held in Appleton March 14, the scheduled date of the primary election.

Nomination papers were filed in city hall up to yesterday for 74 aldermanic candidates, 43 aspirants to county board jobs, and 8 candidates for nomination to the school board. It is the largest number ever to compete in Appleton for political jobs.

Candidates were scheduled to meet in city hall this afternoon to draw for positions on the primary ballots in the various wards.

Voters in the primary will nominate 38 aldermanic candidates and 36 county board candidates, two from each of the city's 18 new wards. Six candidates for the board of education will be nominated at large. The winners will be eligible for the general spring election, April 4.

Registrations

Voters' registrations will be accepted by the city clerk up to Saturday noon, March 4. The clerk's office will be open the evening of March 3 for the convenience of persons who are unable to visit the office during regular hours.

A primary election will be necessary for elimination of candidates for alderman in all the wards of the city but the school ward, where the two candidates automatically are nominated. Primaries for county board jobs will not be necessary in the Third, Fourth, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Eighteenth wards. Five supervisory candidates are unopposed.

Primaries will be held in all of the wards for the board of education jobs because six men must be chosen from eight aspirants. Three posts will be vacated this spring.

School Board

The eight candidates who filed petitions for nomination to school board jobs are William J. Geenen, 742 W. Prospect avenue; Seymour Gmeiner, 925 W. Pacific street; Emmery A. Grunke, 703 N. Morrison street; Dr. George T. Hegner, 722 S. State street; Joseph Hantschel, 226 E. Fremont street; Fred J. Leonard, 1315 S. Alhambra drive; Margaret E. St. Clair, 702 S. 43rd street; and Ward O. Wilder, 838 S. Eldorado street.

Here are the candidates who filed papers for aldermanic and supervisory posts:

Daladier Backed On Recognition of Franco's Regime

Insurgent Leader Organ- izes Court to Try Foes

WON'T GIVE TERMS

Persons Prolonging Re- sistance Must Face Trial

Burgos, Spain—(P)—Generalissimo Francisco Franco, having declared to the world that surrender of republican Spain must be unconditional, formed a court today to try those persons held responsible politically for prolonging resistance to his nationalist regime.

He appointed Enrique Suner Odonez president of a national tribunal of political responsibility charged with the task of judging nationalist Spain's political enemies and with full power to impose broad economic penalties.

Meanwhile, negotiations pointing toward French and British diplomatic recognition of the Franco regime moved slowly in Burgos.

'Red Revolution'

The semi-official French representative, Senator Leon Berard, conferred with British agent Sir Robert Hodgson preparatory to a meeting later with the nationalist foreign minister, Count Francisco Gomez Jordana.

A recent decree fixing responsibility for continuance of the "red revolution" since Oct. 1, 1934—when a revolt broke out in Asturias—covering the current year.

which started July 19, 1936, gives the new nationalist tribunal power to exile republican political leaders to Spanish overseas possessions.

The tribunal also may impose "local exile" by prohibiting persons from returning to places where they lived formerly. Offenders also may be stripped of citizenship rights.

The court has no jurisdiction, however, over persons in the public domain accused of such crimes as murder or treason.

Drews Believes He Was 'Framed'

Testifies at His Trial on Extortion Charge in Milwaukee

Milwaukee—(P)—Walter A. Drews, chief investigator of the state board of health, testified today in his trial on extortion charges that he believed himself the victim of a "frameup."

Drews and Attorney Michael Wittenberg are charged with attempting to extort $2,000 from Dr. Leland Trump, Milwaukee physician, by using as a threat a report tending to show the physician had agreed to participate in illegal operations on two of Drews' deputies.

Hopes Wife Won't Set Record Giving Birth to 2nd Twin

Jasper, Ind.—(P)—Medical authorities say twins have been born as much as 44 days apart but Robert Scherle, who has waited since Feb. 15 for the birth of the twin of his son, William Joseph, said today he held no ambition for establishment of a new record by his wife.

Scherle, after pacing the floor last night outside his wife's room, went to work this morning at the factory where he is employed as a woodworker.

"I hope the other twin comes soon and that it's as healthy as the first," said Scherle.

William Joseph, the couple's fourth child, weighed five pounds at birth.

Dr. L. A. Salb, who is attending Mrs. Scherle, still would make no prediction as to when the second twin might be expected.

Assembly Refuses To Change Stand On Labor Measure

Votes 55 to 39 Against Re- considering Engross- ment of Catlin Bill

Madison—(P)—The assembly refused today to reconsider engrossment of the Catlin labor bill restricting labor disputes to an employer relationship and curbing picketing privileges. The vote was 55 to 39.

The bill advanced toward passage Wednesday when opponents assailed it as "vicious," and supporters claimed it was necessary to protect "legitimate gains," labor already had made.

The assembly passed a bill allowing county boards to pay county park commissioners the same rate board members receive. It engrossed bills forbidding the sale of liquor to persons under 18 years unless accompanied by parents or guardians, and forbidding the use of marijuana except for commercial purposes. The latter carries a penalty of one to two years imprisonment or a fine of $100 to $500 for violation.

It also engrossed a bill providing for a $1 license fee for American Legion "40 and 6" vehicles and defeated a bill permitting towns, cities and villages to issue revenue bonds to construct and operate swimming pools.

Seeks Data on Funds

The assembly adopted a joint resolution introduced by MacIntyre (R) Lancaster, calling upon commissions and trustees in charge of the state teachers' retirement fund and other funds over $100,000 to furnish the joint finance committee by March with a list of their investments, the market value, and number of foreclosure cases.

Deputies Support His Move to Force Issue Monday

VOTE IS 323-261

Leftists Defeated in Seek- ing Full Debate in Parliament

Paris—(P)—The chamber of deputies today gave Premier Daladier a vote of confidence, supporting his decision to ask the cabinet Monday to grant full recognition to the nationalist government of Spain. The vote was 323 to 261.

The vote, which Daladier made a question of confidence, was on the government's demand that interpellations by the leftist people's front in regard to recognizing Generalissimo Franco's regime be put off indefinitely.

It followed Daladier's statement to the chamber that "I intend to propose to the cabinet on Monday, to recognize legally the government of General Franco."

The way thus was cleared formally for recognition by the French cabinet Monday, with announcement of the action to be made jointly with Britain, whose cabinet was understood already to have decided on recognition.

Expect Cabinet O. K.

The chamber's vote was expected to whip the few dissenting members of Daladier's cabinet into line when he puts the question before them.

Following two leftists of the chamber's rostrum, Daladier paid tribute to the "courage of the Spanish republicans (government troops)" but stressed that the fall of the government capital, Barcelona, Jan. 26, had changed the picture in Spain.

"The situation is dramatic," he said, "for two years the republican army has fought heroically but it has had to retreat and abandon Barcelona without fighting."

The premier pointed out that 600 kilometers (about 372 miles) of France's southern frontier "is now in contact with General Franco's Spain."

"That is why I feel," he said, "that the French government must have good neighborly relations with the real government, which, from now on, is that of General Franco."

Daladier rallied his majority in the chamber against the demand of the leftist people's front that the recognition issue be debated fully in parliament before Monday's meeting of the cabinet, which is expected to decide to recognize Franco.

"The problem presented is no longer a Spanish problem," Forcin declared. "It is a problem of the Italian-German bloc against France."

Says Pledges Broken

Recalling German and Italian promises to withdraw from Spain after the civil war, he asserted that Germany in the past had violated promises and likely would again in the future. He added:

"As long as Italian and German soldiers are in nationalist Spain, it is not possible to recognize the Burgos government de jure."

All the leading cabinet members, including Daladier and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet, were present when debate opened. The premier directed the debate for the government.

Technically the debate was not on the government's foreign policy but on the chamber's right to discuss recognition before the cabinet takes action—rather than afterwards.

As soon as the leftist interpellation was introduced, Edouard Herriot, president of the chamber, demanded a rising vote on whether the deputies wanted to proceed immediately to fix a time for the debate. The questioning was carried, with Daladier leading the majority in voting.

Daladier then declared: "The government demands indefinite postponement of interpellation and poses a question of confidence."

Other Rationals

Hungary and Spain also were battlegrounds today in Europe's conflict between right and left.

Hungary, taking apparently contradictory measures, struck heavily against extremists of both right and left—Nazis and communists. She acted to eradicate her chief Nazi party; she signed the anti-communist pact.

The leading Hungarian Nazi party, the Hungarists, with an enrollment estimated at more than 1,000,000, was banned as a menace to public safety and its property confiscated after raids on its headquarters in Budapest. More than 800 persons were arrested.

Hungary formally joined Germany, Italy, and Japan in their accord against international communism. The step was explained with

Will of Pope Pius XI Leaves Possessions to Holy See With Exception of Personal Objects

Vatican City—(P)—L'Osservatore Romano disclosed today the late Pope Pius XI left all his possessions to the Holy See except for some personal objects which he instructed be distributed among his closest assistants.

The Vatican City newspaper said the pontiff's last testament named as executors his two private secretaries, Monsignors Carlo Confalonieri and Diego Vainini.

It said the will consisted of a few pages written in the pope's own hand. The first page was dated May 31, 1927, and the last Jan. 16, 1939.

The last sheet was prefaced with the words:

"That which herewith follows are the dispositions of my last desires in the holy name of the good and blessed God."

He referred to his personal possessions as of "not great pecuniary value."

Charge Two More Men With Raiding Cottages

Chippewa Falls—(P)—Two more men were in custody today on charges involving raids on stores and summer cottages in northern Wisconsin towns, bringing to five the number of arrests by sheriff's officers of three counties.

Alfred Lowers, 21, of Irvine, Chippewa Falls suburb, and his brother, George Lowers, 31, Minneapolis, were arrested yesterday after three Pippin brothers had been taken into custody by posse at Finley lake, the day before.

The Lowers brothers were arraigned in county court and charged with possession of stolen property. Officers said they found men and women wearing apparel at their home here, Bernard Pippin, 30, of Red Granite, oldest of the other trio, also was arraigned on the same charge. The other two, Donald, 31, and Bryan, 27, are being held for further investigation.

Washington—(P)—Business men and politicians alike turned to the midnight today for an indication of the administration's plans for affecting industry, taxes and labor.

When Harry L. Hopkins speaks tonight at Des Moines, Ia., (9:30 p. m. C. S. T.) many persons in the capital expect that his first major address, secretary of the League of Commerce, will sound a conciliatory note to business.

Sales Tax for Relief Funds And New Reorganization Plan Up Before Joint Finance Group

Madison—(P)—A sales tax for relief purposes and a new governmental reorganization program loomed as possibilities today as the joint legislative finance committee studied bills calling for relief appropriations and the appointment of a director of departmental research.

The committee, at hearings yesterday asked county, municipal and other representatives if they objected to a sales tax but did not indicate it would recommend one.

The research director, provided for in a bill introduced by Senator Roethe (R), Fennimore, would study means of consolidating and reorganizing state departments. It has administration approval.

Committee Chairman Otto Mueller (R), Wausau, and Senator Brown (R), Oshkosh, asked F. N. MacIntyre, secretary of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities his attitude on a sales tax.

MacIntyre said he was not prepared to take a definite stand but indicated that his organization would give it serious study.

A. J. Hess, representative Forest county, said he favored some kind of sales tax. Senator Saul (D), Fennimore, author of a cigarette tax bill, said he was not prepared to take a definite stand now.

Discussion of the general sales tax came about as the committee considered alternative relief proposals to be financed by the cigarette tax or a special levy on gross receipts of telephone companies.

It was estimated the cigarette tax would raise $5,000,000, and the phone tax $3,000,000 annually.

The bill for appointment of a research director was endorsed by Lieutenant Governor Walter S. Goodland and Senator Bolens (D), Port Washington.

Catlin Finishes Draft of New Bill To Integrate Bar

Would Make Lawyers Servants of State, Under Control of Court

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison — Assemblyman Mark Catlin of Outagamie county, (R), said today that he has completed the draft of a bill for an integrated bar in Wisconsin, a movement which was defeated by a single vote in the state assembly when presented by the Wisconsin Bar association last session.

Catlin expressed confidence that the measure, endorsed by leading Wisconsin lawyers, will become law at this session.

The bar would make membership in the bar association a condition precedent to the practice of law. At present such membership is entirely voluntary.

The state supreme court would regulate the organized bar, set dues, and supervise generally.

According to the preface, the purpose of the move is to promote "the better administration of justice, maintaining a high standard of professional conduct, and furnishing an organization through which such objects may be obtained."

President Robert Rieser of the board of governors of the state bar association has appointed this committee to sponsor the bill in the legislature: O. A. Ostreich, Janesville, Ray B. Graves, Wisconsin Rapids, W. T. Doar, New Richmond, Carl B. Rix, Milwaukee, Benjamin Poss, Milwaukee, C. B. Bird, Wausau, and T. L. Doyle, Fond du Lac.

The current bulletin of the state bar association says that the integrated bar idea has been adopted thus far in 20 states, while in 14 other states the profession is striving for unification.

"Judging from the history of this movement in other states, it is only a matter of time when it will be adopted in Wisconsin, since this is a progressive movement and Wisconsin is a progressive state," the bulletin observes.

Clintonville Department Summoned to Thomas Mervyn Place

Clintonville — About $500 damage resulted from a fire Thursday afternoon at the Thomas Mervyn tavern, located on Highway 22, north of Embarras. The Clintonville fire department was summoned about 4 o'clock and soon had the blaze under control. The fire started in an upstairs room from a defective chimney.

Hilarious Time Was Had by All As Public Debated Bill to Bar Married Women From State Jobs

BY JOHN W. WYNGAARD

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau Madison — The legislative mill stood still for four hours yesterday afternoon as most of the members, some 600 spirited spectators, and a never-ending string of speakers of more or less eloquence argued a question which has been argued over and over again during the last eight years, and which to a lot of people seems to be of considerable moment.

The question is "Should married women work?" More particularly, "Should married women work in the employ of the state or its local units?"

The question of married women working has furnished entertaining annual shows in the legislature ever since Fond du Lac sent a shoe salesman named Maurice Fitzsimmons to the legislature eight years ago. This year the subject was good for two performances. The repeat show was held yesterday. The arguments were substantially the same as those heard on both sides in the many previous engagements. The only difference is that this year the audience joined in the spirit of the thing to a better degree.

Sponsored by Bachelor Fond du Lac's representative in the assembly is a well-dressed bachelor. Although he is a veteran in the legislature he is best known for his service to his constituents in his tireless campaign to rid the public payrolls of the state of married women whose family incomes total more than $2,000, or whose husbands earn more than $1,500 a year, plus $400 for each dependent child. For that project he has been heckled by women's clubs, by individual women, even by his colleagues. But persistence is one of his prime characteristics; some of his associates even suspect that he enjoys the prominence which his crusade has given him.

The dapper, pipe-smoking assemblyman himself led off the battery of supporters for the bill with the calm assertion before a radio microphone rigged up for the occasion and a packed assembly chamber that he wants to "restore the rights of women," and that after long years of work he feels his goal is at hand.

Too many of today's women in gainful employment are married—27 per cent, in fact, he went on. Their place is in the home, and he wants to help protect and to foster motherhood and family ties.

A home must have a mother, he averred, backing up his statement with a quotation from Schopenhauer, who had some pretty definite theories on the position of womanhood in society.

Men who allow their wives to earn their bread, he charged are "biological husbands" (his spelling), while their wives "have commercialized their wedding rings."

Raps League Those who argued against his "idea Fitzsimmons dismissed as "inconsequential, irrelevant, and immaterial." "Men should raise their humiliated heads," he continued, assuring the cheering women in the chamber that he is a "bachelor by denial, not by choice."

The afternoon abounded with well-directed jibes. The League of Women Voters, Fitzsimmons' most implacable foe, hasn't enough popular influence to "elect a deputy coroner," he challenged.

Best show on the opposition side was furnished by Mrs. Edna Taylor Giles of Madison, who introduced herself as a "farmer," but who was identified later by one of the Fitzsimmons bloc as a former New York actress.

A lissom young lady, she appeared in corduroy slacks, and a piquant hat and tore into the Fond du Lac solon with the plain statement that his bill is "cheap and unworthy of a gentleman."

She was promptly hooted by the audience—incidentally the audience enjoyed itself hugely with the acquiescence of the almost-forgotten committee on state affairs all afternoon—but added that Fitzsimmons' proud opus was nothing but "A foolish little bill."

Women Will Rise If any legislature is foolish enough to pass it into law, she warned eloquently, enraged womanhood will rise up to turn them out of office and elect in their stead their own kind. She thanked Fitzsimmons for arousing women to a consciousness of their rights, and the threat to them.

Legislative supporters, and the cheerleaders on the sidelines, she went on amid hisses, have a "keep 'em in their place attitude" toward women, "they would doom us to mediocrity."

Other opponents came from the Association of University Women, the League of Women Voters, the Y. W. C. A., various other women's clubs, the Teachers' Union, and the Conference of Social Workers.

Among other comments were these: "We might as well bar blue eyed or black-haired persons from public employment. Why should the state be regimented just because the gentleman from Fond du Lac had an unhappy adolescence?"—William Card, University of Wisconsin Teachers Union.

"This bill would eliminate some of the freedom for which organized labor has fought for countless years,"—Marshall Frederick, Milwaukee Trades Council.

"Opponents of this bill fear the responsibilities of married life,"—Assemblyman S. J. Balzer, orator laureate of the Wisconsin assembly. "Ability and efficiency should be the basis of public service, not economic need."

Informed observers said today that the Fitzsimmons bill this year has a better chance of passage than ever before, but that it will probably be defeated by a small margin.

Madison — Cigarette burns on the new, $4,000 plush carpet in the assembly chamber ruffled legislative tempers today.

Most irate were Assemblymen Slater (R) Milwaukee, and Ludvigsen (R) Waukesha, who took the floor to criticize the conduct of the audience at the hearing yesterday on the "working wives" bill.

Ludvigsen said spectators who used the carpet as a depository for their cigarette butts showed poor appreciation of the assembly's willingness to let them occupy the chamber. He warned that future hearings might be confined to the small committee rooms.

Slater also deplored the carpet burns and asked committee chairmen to put a ban on future outbursts of hissing and booing at public hearings.

Henry Raatz, Sheboygan, displayed fishnets and figures to prove his contention that some operators are losing their investments. Charging regulations on the size of mesh have been unreasonable, he said: "It might as well try to catch bears on the capitol lawn as to stay in business."

Heil's Idea "The men we appoint to these $5,000 a year jobs are all right when we are here but it is a different matter when we adjourn," Get-enjoys the prominence which his crusade has given him.

The dapper, pipe-smoking assemblyman himself led off the battery of supporters for the bill with the calm assertion before a radio microphone rigged up for the occasion and a packed assembly chamber that he wants to "restore the rights of women," and that after long years of work he feels his goal is at hand.

Women Will Rise If any legislature is foolish enough to pass it into law, she warned eloquently, enraged womanhood will rise up to turn them out of office and elect in their stead their own kind. She thanked Fitzsimmons for arousing women to a consciousness of their rights, and the threat to them.

Legislative supporters, and the cheerleaders on the sidelines, she went on amid hisses, have a "keep 'em in their place attitude" toward women, "they would doom us to mediocrity."

Other opponents came from the Association of University Women, the League of Women Voters, the Y. W. C. A., various other women's clubs, the Teachers' Union, and the Conference of Social Workers.

Among other comments were these: "We might as well bar blue eyed or black-haired persons from public employment. Why should the state be regimented just because the gentleman from Fond du Lac had an unhappy adolescence?"—William Card, University of Wisconsin Teachers Union.

"This bill would eliminate some of the freedom for which organized labor has fought for countless years,"—Marshall Frederick, Milwaukee Trades Council.

"Opponents of this bill fear the responsibilities of married life,"—Assemblyman S. J. Balzer, orator laureate of the Wisconsin assembly. "Ability and efficiency should be the basis of public service, not economic need."

Informed observers said today that the Fitzsimmons bill this year has a better chance of passage than ever before, but that it will probably be defeated by a small margin.

Madison — Cigarette burns on the new, $4,000 plush carpet in the assembly chamber ruffled legislative tempers today.

Most irate were Assemblymen Slater (R) Milwaukee, and Ludvigsen (R) Waukesha, who took the floor to criticize the conduct of the audience at the hearing yesterday on the "working wives" bill.

Ludvigsen said spectators who used the carpet as a depository for their cigarette butts showed poor appreciation of the assembly's willingness to let them occupy the chamber. He warned that future hearings might be confined to the small committee rooms.

Slater also deplored the carpet burns and asked committee chairmen to put a ban on future outbursts of hissing and booing at public hearings.

Henry Raatz, Sheboygan, displayed fishnets and figures to prove his contention that some operators are losing their investments. Charging regulations on the size of mesh have been unreasonable, he said: "It might as well try to catch bears on the capitol lawn as to stay in business."

59 Stay in Mine, Continue Strike

Defy Sickness; Union Head Says Move Is Unauthorized

Hazleton, Pa. — (AP) — Cheerful in defiance of health-ravaging dampness and cold, a band of 59 hardy coal miners carried on a subterranean "sit-down" today—determined to stay deep in a mine at nearby Oneida until their demands for back pay were met in full.

The miners refused to accept the Wolfe Collieries company's offer to pay current wages due four days ago providing they would abandon their voluntary prison. They sent up word they would stay underground until they also received pay for their claim is due for two weeks in January.

Undaunted by sickness which took three of the number from the shaft since the strike began Wednesday, the miners huddled in blankets around steam power pipes on levels 250 and 500 feet below the surface, sang, played cards and listened to a radio sent down by friends.

Outside, their wives took over a makeshift kitchen set up to supply them with hot coffee and food. An appeal went out to the local Red Cross chapter for blankets.

Most of the men were on the 250-foot level. They kept in communication with fellow workers through a mine telephone system.

Among the underground visitors was the parish priest, the Rev. Joseph Baran. He conveyed word from Hugh V. Brown, district president of the United Mine Workers of America, that the strike was "unauthorized" and pleaded for the men to come out. His plea failed to change their position.

cially as a measure of defense and not as an act against soviet Russia. At Helsinki, Manchukuo, Japanese protectorate, also signed up with the anti-communist powers, raising to five the number of signatories since the pact was first drawn between Germany and Japan in November, 1936.

Britain, on the threshold of recognition of Franco, was on record with one of the strongest warnings she has yet made to the dictator nations of Europe. Her foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax, voiced it yesterday in the red-walled house of lords.

Taking his striking figure of speech from English signs to motorists, the foreign secretary warned: "Halt! Major road ahead!"

Unmarried men and women in Germany were hit hard by a revision of the income tax law enjoining the government to take up to 25 per cent of their taxable incomes. The tax apparently was intended as an inducement to marriage.

Reports to Damascus, Syria, said tribes demanding independence from France had started demonstrations in scattered districts of the mandated state against the new nationalist government of Loufi Hafar.

Water Colors and Drawings Displayed At Appleton School

Water color pictures, painted by students of Peter Giovanni's art classes, are being exhibited in the corridors on the third floor at Appleton High school. The water colors, most of them of slum districts in cities or farm scenes, were painted by Aaron Ashel, Robert Bodmer, Rebecca Gochbauer, Dorothy Hellig, Ralph Schubert and Kenneth Wheeler.

Patterns suitable for floor coverings were designed and are being displayed by Arnold Abel, Marie Arndt, Natalie Block, Mary Bongers, Betty Gehrke, Florian Heimerman, Morris Kain, Helen Kluge, Rose Marie Loose, Gerald Oswald, LaVonne Reese, Richard Wiese and Benjamin Zuleger.

Pencil illustrations on exhibit were drawn by Sylvester Bayer, Ben Blacher, Wayne Mussett, Peggie Piette, Doris Rehmer, and Aileen Welson. Previous drawings were made by Lloyd Ellefson, Barbara Graham and Kenneth Wheeler.

Congress Members Still Debate '38 Election Meaning

Democrats Fearful of Outcome in 1940, Lawrence Claims

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington—Apropos of a recent comment that members of congress are still debating among themselves that the elections of 1938 meant a suggestion is being made in various quarters that the best way to find out what they meant is to examine the so-called tradition that the "party" which wins the house of representatives in midterm elections wins the presidential election two years later.

Lawrence

Like all political traditions, there are exceptions, but the statement is correct since 1880, though there were special circumstances in connection with the midterm election of 1930 which slightly impair the uniformity of the rule. It will be recalled that the Republicans actually won in 1930, but, by the time congress convened in 1931, there was a Democratic majority of 5, due to post-elections growing out of deaths of members of congress during the intervening 13 months.

So, for all practical purposes, it is true that the party that wins the midterm elections has been successful two years later. It is even more significant that a party that makes gains of at least 11 per cent finds itself victorious two years later in the presidential election, but even this rule did not work in the close elections of 1918 and 1926.

Panicky Condition
The important inference that can be drawn from the figure is that congress has been deeply impressed by the tradition, and there is a peculiar panicky condition among the Democrats in congress that the Republicans may win in 1940. Try as they may to overcome this apprehension, the Democrats are unquestionably fearful of the outcome in 1940.

What makes matters worse from the Democrats' standpoint is that, for the first time in six years, they are up against a real minority. This is by no means a reflection on the quality of the minority in other years. But it is a fact that the Republicans, with their 169 votes in the house, can exercise greater influence than they have at any time within the last six years with a relatively small number. The same thing is true in the senate, where the Republican minority counts for more than it did before.

To understand the importance of this, the effectiveness of minority is not always measured by numbers, but by the influence exerted upon the majority, where there is usually a notable awareness of just what are the underlying trends that are giving political sustenance to the minority in winning elections for them.

Examine Reasons
In other words, in every instance where a prospective turn in the tide appears, majority members who are up for election within two years are apt to examine the sources and reasons which gave their opponents victory at the polls in the preceding election.

This is the main reason why there is dissension at the moment in the Democratic party. It might better be called a "wavering" as between points of view. There are Democrats, for instance, who felt sympathetic right along for the New Deal objectives, but were critical of the methods. These Democrats are wondering just now whether these objectives can be saved, lest public opinion become antagonistic by confusing objectives and methods in a sweeping reaction. When protests are accumulated, the original objectives of legislation are often lost sight of in the melee of resentments that ensue over specific grievances in legislation.

Issue over specific grievances in legislation.

Biggest Problem
The biggest problem which the Democrats, therefore, have to face at the moment is a battle to save their objectives. The Republicans, with quiet strategy and forbearance, are saying very little about objectives they have in mind and are merely bombarding the Democratic position with a barrage of criticism referring to specific items in the Democratic program of the last six years.

There is no denying, moreover, that the Democrats are uneasy about the way Representative John Martin, Republican leader in the house, has organized the minority members. He seems to have persuaded them that their main chance for victory lies in cohesion and following a leader. In most every vote this session, the Republicans have stuck together, presenting a solid bloc, and this means something because the majority will every now and then swing over enough votes from its own ranks to give the minority an actual control of the situation on particular measures. This has not happened often at this session, but it would not be surprising to see a coalition of Republicans and independent Democrats operating together on specific questions in which the administration leaders may be taking what may be termed the unpopular side.

Send Out Warnings
The Democratic majority, on the other hand, has been sending out warnings to its own members that they must cease to be political individualists and must also follow a leader. Part of the difficulty, of course, is that there is criticism of the president's method of handling the members of his own party. The Jackson day speech was regarded as excellent in harmony terms, but as failing to provide a formula of close cooperation in harmony terms, and failing to provide a formula of close cooperation between the White House and the Democrats in congress.

The so-called conservative Democrats are pointing to the series of appointments made by the president as a sign he does not mean to vary his point of view toward the middle-of-the-roads in the party and that he will insist upon maintaining the same line of policy as he has the last six years. The president, on the other hand, is anxious not to lose the "objectives" of the New Deal by making surrender of any important principle. To him, the fight for liberalism admits of no compromise, even though it will probably be conceded at the executive end of the avenue that a re-examination of methods of developing the legislative program would be constructively helpful.

Collector Gives Exemption Rules For Federal Tax

Returns Required on All Gross Incomes of $5,000 or More

Federal income tax returns are required of every single person or married person not living with husband or wife who had net income of $1,000 or more last year or gross income of $5,000 or more, and generally, husband and wife living together, who had an aggregate net income of $2,500 or more or an aggregate gross income of $5,000 or more, according to Raymond G. Mayrand, deputy collector of internal revenue stationed at the federal building here.

Widowers, widows, divorcees and married persons separated by mutual consent are classed as single persons. The personal exemptions are $1,000 for single persons and $2,500 for married persons living together and for heads of families. Husband and wife living together at the close of the taxable year may file a single joint return, even though one has no gross income, or even make separate returns of the income of each. If separate returns are filed, one may not report income which belongs to the other, but must report only the income which actually belongs to him. No joint return may be made if either

Must be Sworn to
If a joint return is not made by an agent of the taxpayers it must be signed by both husband and wife and sworn to before a proper officer by the spouse preparing the return, or if neither or both prepare the return, then by both spouses.

Husband and wife may elect each year whether to file a joint return or separate returns. Where separate returns are filed by husband and wife, the joint personal exemption or $2,500 may be taken by either or divided between them in any proportion as agreed upon.

In filing a joint return husband and wife compute the earned income credit in the same manner as in filing separate returns. If taxpayer's net income is not more than $3,000, the entire net income is considered to be earned net income.

National Guard in Need of Increased Funds, Immell Says

Declares State Armory Facilities Should Be Improved

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—The state of Wisconsin during the last 17 years has reduced its support of the National Guard from $600,000 a year to $200,000, with the result that armories and other equipment are in bad shape, and the strength of the guard has been reduced from almost 7,000 to 5,000 today, the legislative joint finance committee was informed this week by the adjutant general's department.

Adjutant General Ralph M. Immell appeared before the committee this week to protest a proposed cut in the department's appropriation of from $120,000 to $200,000 for the reconstruction of existing armory facilities and the construction of new ones.

The guard today uses 62 armories scattered throughout Wisconsin, it was learned, but "the majority of the armory facilities are grossly inadequate," according to Immell, commander of the guard.

The department submitted a report showing that because of the lack of state funds, Wisconsin has been forced to allow much federal money for armory construction to go to neighboring states which now have a larger, and more costly guard than has this state.

Immell recommended an immediate appropriation of $200,000 and an annual $100,000 expenditure for 10 years for building purposes alone. "Adequate armory facilities will not only improve training at home stations but will also provide for adequate storage and protection of military property," he said.

Other states have been fortunate in securing federal aid for armories and camp sites, whereas Wisconsin has been denied the benefit of federal funds for such purposes because of lack of state appropriation," he continued. Illinois during the last two years has built, with federal money, more than $2,800,000 worth of armories, while corresponding advances were made in other states.

The adjutant general said that he had obtained approval of armory projects totaling $1,000,000, but that they "failed to materialize because of the lack of state funds."

During the years 1919 to 1923, the average annual state appropriation for the guard was $600,000, the department's report said, while the per capita cost was $90. Today the per capita cost is a $200,000 expenditure, or $39.82.

Wisconsin spends less for the guard than any of her neighbors, it was shown. Illinois allots $686,725 annually, Michigan $307,000, Iowa $233,659, Minnesota $279,800 while Wisconsin's per capita cost today is lowest.

Would Force Economy
Immell said that reduction in the present appropriation would force economy by the transferring out of certain local units and the concentration of men and armory facilities in cities which will accommodate more units.

That this will be difficult was the warning of Immell. In the past, he said, local citizens and business interests when they have learned of proposed abolition of local guard units bring "great pressure to bear, through mass meetings and sending delegates to the governor to prevent such a move."

Federal military funds, it was explained, can only be spent for designated purposes, including drill pay, instruction camps, caretakers, purchase of new military equipment and animal food, supplies and the preparation of camp sites.

Of the 62 armories presently in use, 14 are state-owned, located at Oaksho, Marinette, Fond du Lac, Hudson, Tomah, Monroe, Sheboygan, LaCrosse, Abbotford, Clintonville, Oconomowoc, Whitefish Bay, and two at Milwaukee. There are 10 organizations and armories and 38 are rented from private owners by the state.

The armories house 93 units of the Wisconsin National Guard, which has a strength today of slightly more than 5,000 officers and enlisted men.

Today and Tomorrow

BY WALTER LEFFMAN

Watchman, What of the Night?

Although it will seem to many like foolish optimism, my own view is that the world has very probably already passed the most critical point of danger. Hard as it is to see one's own time in its true historic perspective, I, nevertheless, believe that the period of extreme danger, the danger of a world war or of the ignominious collapse of the democracies, was in the three months from about Sept. 1 to about Dec. 1, that is to say from the beginning of the panic that led to Munich until the failure of the general strike in France.

Those were the most dangerous days through which we have lived since the World War. During that period Great Britain and France were weak and divided and demoralized, whereas Germany, Italy and Japan were at the peak of their military power and prestige. But approximately since December the situation has, I think, changed fundamentally for the better.

The situation in the autumn may be described as one in which Germany, Italy, and Japan had succeeded in mobilizing for war purposes their whole strength. Great Britain and France, on the other hand, were still on a peace basis, having come nowhere near mobilizing their immense reserves.

The great fact in the present situation is that Germany, Italy and Japan have mobilized all their reserves, and have therefore reached the limit of their military development. In the matter of training troops and officers the German Army can still be strengthened, but in all other essentials the German war machine is now just about as big as the available resources and man power permit it to become.

Reich is Desperately In Need of Capital
The outward evidence for this is to be found in what Hitler and other German leaders are now saying; the objective evidence is to be found in the undisputed official statistics which show that the reserves of man power, of materials and of capital are now in use.

That there is a shortage of labor we know, because the Third Reich is being compelled to resort to the conscription of labor. That there is a shortage of materials we know, because of the desperate devices that are being used to get hold of them by barter arrangements. That there is a shortage of capital we know, because the economic advance by the Nazis into central Europe and the Balkans has proved to be very much less successful than appeared probable after Munich. It is less successful because the Nazis simply do not have the capital needed to develop and exploit the undeveloped resources of eastern Europe.

Given a situation in which all the reserves of labor, materials and capital are fully employed, any attempt to expand further, or even to maintain armaments at their present level, must inevitably lead to the expropriation of the well-to-do and the rich, or to an inflationary rise of prices, which would mean suffering for large masses of the people. The resignation of Dr. Schacht was the outward evidence that Germany had reached the point where it had to choose either to expropriate, or to inflate, or to reduce armaments, or to risk a world war.

War For Hitler Would Be Great Gamble Now
We do not know which of these choices Hitler will make. What we do know is that they are all dangerous to him and that for him war is the most dangerous of all. That does not mean that he will not in any circumstances chance war. But it does mean that war is no longer, as it was in the autumn, a good gamble for him. It has become a desperate gamble.

It has become a desperate gamble for a number of reasons. In the first place, he would have to take the offensive against the Anglo-French alliance, that is to say against the best navy and the best army in Europe. His only ally would be Italy and Italy is extremely vulnerable.

Second, German and Italian morale cannot be depended upon in a long war in which it is necessary to take the offensive, or be strangled by the blockade.

Third, once Germany goes to war, the whole people is armed, and the real rulers of Germany are not the Nazi politicians but the army leaders.

Fourth, British and French morale, once it has nerved itself to withstand the shock of the first air raids, would almost surely be very high as long as the people were obviously fighting to repel invasion.

Fifth, the British and French are now unmistakably on the way to mobilizing their huge but hitherto unused reserves.

Sixth, an offensive war initiated by aerial bombardment of London and Paris would, as Mr. Hoover pointed out in his recent speech, create a public opinion that would make anything like the existing neutrality law unenforceable. Under these circumstances, the reserves available to Britain and France would destroy any real chance of an ultimate German victory. No one knows this better than the radical Nazis, and that is why they are so furious at the United States and at the President.

While Results Are Clear War Is Not Inevitable
If this is the real situation, the practical conclusion to be drawn from it is quite simple and clear. It is to keep cool, to be confident, to speak quietly, and resolutely and firmly to proceed with the armament programs in Great Britain, in France, and in the United States. War is not in the least inevitable. War is not even probable provided it is made clear that no one is organizing a crusade to impose democracy on Germany and that no one of the democracies will fail to defend itself if it is attacked.

A purely defensive policy is not only the one which fits morally the ideals of all free peoples; it is also, as a matter of diplomacy and military strategy, the soundest and strongest policy. If the situation in Europe, particularly inside Germany, is what it appears to be, then the defensive policy—the policy of armaments without hysteria

57 of Sophomore Pupils Rank High In Ability Tests

12 Per Cent of Class Place In Upper Bracket in State Examination

Fifty-seven of 477 Appleton High school sophomores who took the Henmon-Nelson native mental ability tests last December ranked in the upper 10 per cent among state students, results of the tests show.

The examination was given to about 38,000 sophomore high school students. The results show about 12 per cent of Appleton sophomores in the upper bracket.

Students who ranked high are Arnold Abel, Dorothy Bailey, William Baker, Elaine Carlson, Duane Clark, Stewart Cooper, Norma Crow, Bruce Curry, Eugene Dauchert, Bruce Davidson, Robert Dawson, George Dear, William DeLong, Inez Descher, Thomas Donaldson, Merrie Evert, William Keron, Mary Fiedler, Frances Galpin, Joice Gayhart, Sherman Given, Elaine Goertl, Arlene Goffin, Carl Goldbeck, Marjorie Graff, Francis and without any entangling commitments, the diplomatic policy of non-intervention in Germany's China or Spain's internal affairs, the policy of emphasizing the virtues of freedom rather than the vices of tyranny—is best calculated to save mankind from the catastrophe of another world war. And in averting a world war the liberties of men will more surely be preserved and restored than by any other conceivable method.

The supreme fact in these days is that a world war has probably been averted, can almost surely be averted. It will not be averted by becoming frightened into provocation nor by being frightened into cowardice. It can be averted, it is being averted, by being calm, by being confident and by being resolute.

Expect Jump in Number Of Month's Needy Cases

While an increase in the number of cases given aid by the city relief department is expected to climb for this month, the total cost is not expected to exceed that for January, according to F. A. W. Hammond, city relief director. The reason is that February is a short month, having three days less than the preceding month. In January 219 cases were cared for at a cost of $5,735.91.

Hopkins' Future Depends on How Well He Handles New Job

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—Harry Hopkins, in trying to undertake a new role as secretary of commerce, is the victim of shortsighted sabotage by the very interests which he is trying to help.

With what I believe to be complete sincerity, Hopkins wants to bring government and business into closer co-operation. Business has been calling for that, and now there is a man in the administration, closer to Roosevelt than anyone else, who is ready to take business up on its plea and see what can be done.

As a New Dealer with his feet on the ground, Hopkins sees that unemployment cannot be materially reduced until business activity increases. He sees business activity retarded by hostility between business-men and the government. He sees certain causes of this hostility which he believes can be eliminated. His purpose as secretary of commerce is to try to remove some of those obstructions to recovery.

That is the basic thought which undoubtedly will underlie his first speech as secretary of commerce, at Des Moines tomorrow night.

But just as the former WPA administrator is about Raymond Clapper to emerge from his cocoon into a more glorified incarnation as secretary of commerce, on the eve of his first speech in his new capacity, a cry is set up that Hopkins is out to get the 1940 presidential nomination. Some minor politician in Iowa is widely quoted to that effect and the incident although disavowed is used to brand Hopkins as making a cheap grab for the presidential nomination.

The fact that Hopkins is making his first speech in Iowa is cited as indicating that he was merely looking for a good cornfield from which to offer himself as the people's choice. Actually Hopkins wanted to make this speech before the National Association of Manufacturers, and would have done so had not conservatives in that organization treated him like a porch climber.

It's Only Human to Hope for Opportunity

I am willing to suspect Hopkins of hoping for the 1940 nomination. I have a long list of such suspects. When men rise to prominence in national affairs, they dream dreams. They're all human. You wouldn't have to ask Hopkins twice to take the nomination—nor a thousand others.

But Hopkins can't be as dumb about political matters as might be inferred from some of the insinuations now broadcast. He knows, if he knows anything about it at all, that he has just one chance at the presidential nomination. That chance lies in doing a notable job as secretary of commerce. His chance is a slender one at best, and if he boots the ball as secretary of commerce, even that chance goes out.

Circumstances are such that the interest of the country, the interest of the New Deal, and the personal interest of Harry Hopkins all dictate that he do a constructive job of bringing business and government into better working relationship. Can't Succeed Unless the Country Prospers

Hopkins knows, as does every friend of the administration who is looking at realities rather than labels, that in the long run the New Deal cannot succeed unless the country can become prosperous under it. Good intentions will not be accepted indefinitely by the country as a substitute for results. Popular confidence in the Roosevelt program is ebbing because it has not brought sufficient recovery. The middle class, which holds the po-

THE SILENT SERMON

There is a Protestant minister in Germany who preaches an eloquent daily sermon.

And yet he is not permitted to utter a word excepting the few brief syllables that make known his essential wants.

The gentleman we mention is known as Reverend Martin Niemöller, a name that should be remembered. It was a year ago this month that Niemöller was found innocent of a charge of treason against the Reich based upon his statement that "We must obey God rather than man," but a short sentence was imposed upon him because he had not been sufficiently reverent toward his rulers, and then he was ordered freed since he had served more than his sentence while awaiting trial.

Niemöller had been tried by a puppet court and yet most of such courts must have at least a thin film of evidence of wrong-doing before punishment is permissible. So we may confidently believe that Niemöller has done no wrong yet he is not a free man.

As he emerged from the people's court a year ago he was pounced upon by police agents who took him into "protective custody." He was hustled off to a concentration camp where he has been "protected" effectively.

Courts are one thing but tyrants are even higher than evidence. The German grapevine brings to many American correspondents the sequel of Niemöller's re-arrest. He declined to alter his position concerning the priority of God in his beliefs.

In time Niemöller is bound to become a martyr. But martyrdom is not an easy role. His place in history will be as high above the tyrant who has imprisoned him as heaven above hell. But that does not make his cell soft nor relieve him of the monotonous existence which is his life and which is torture.

Yet the fact that all Germany knows and understands the details of this case serves to a certain extent to both attack and solidify the Nazi position. Certain examples of punishment held up before the public in order to break a man's spirit, even though they fail, tend to break the spirits of others. But they make more determined the men of character who hear of them.

RACE-TOLERANCE

The worst thing about that incredible Nazi meeting of the German-American Bund in Madison Square Garden, New York, was its Jew-baiting. Other forms of non-compliance with the spirit of American democracy might be overlooked, but any campaign to spread anti-Semitism among the American people, especially at this time, is wicked.

Surely this persecuted race is having enough misery in Europe today, without pouring out the vials of racial wrath in America. Every consideration of justice, democracy, decency and civilization demands that here, if nowhere else, the Hebrew race shall have a square-deal—that America shall continue practicing its traditional principles of fair play and equal opportunity for all branches of its citizenship, regardless of racial origin.

Even in Germany, in spite of all the poison spread by the Nazi party, most of the German people are said to be out of sympathy with Hitler's persecution of this race. If there were any persecution logical or permissible in this country, it would be persecution of other groups.

This is not merely a question of the Jews themselves, or of the minority of German-Americans speaking through the German-American Bund. It is a question involving our whole American philosophy of racial tolerance and equality of citizenship. Nazism here would destroy our democracy and dissolve our Union, and any phase of it is intolerable.

BUT NOT FERDINAND!

The victory of United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, young, debonair, up-and-coming statesman, over Ferdinand the Bull in the Colby Junior College's "master man of 1938" contest reflects, we believe, commendable thoughtfulness and sound judgment on the part of the young people.

Senator Lodge, a personable chap with a bright future, has many elements of appeal and the vote of the students of Colby Junior College is a tribute to his achievements and his prospects. There are those, in fact, who mention him as a presidential possibility in 1940.

To Ferdinand the defeat means nothing. He has had his opportunities for crowded hours of glorious life, the dust of battle in the arena, the acclaim and plaudits of the throngs, and has rejected them for the quiet life of his native hills, the fragrance of flowers, the songs of birds and a quiet spot under a cork tree.

There are those who would be downcast by the result of the Colby Junior College contest for "master man of 1938." But not Ferdinand.

DISCOUNT THE WAR SCARE

British officials and the British public generally are described as being "amazed" over streamer headlines announcing that because of "ominous reports" from Europe President Roosevelt may curtail his cruise with the fleet. The English observers are said to be unaware of any dangerous developments. In fact, they regard the situation as more hopeful than it has been for some time.

All this is a reminder of the need for calm nerves and cautious utterance on the part of American officials who are in any way connected with the maintenance of foreign policy. The world at large is too jittery to stand the conjuring up of imaginary ogres. A crisis, otherwise avoidable, might easily be precipitated by injudicious expressions and the voicing of baseless fears.

Proposals for the financing of huge increases in American naval, military and aeronautical strength, suggestions that the little island of Guam, 5,000 miles distant from these shores, be heavily fortified, declarations that the United States stands shoulder-to-shoulder with the European democracies and ill-considered wisecracks mouthed by high Cabinet officers constitute the kind of thing that could prove extremely provocative in a period of international stress and strain.

What's needed above all else is a demonstration of administrative restraint predicated upon the sound though homely philosophy of staying home and minding our own business. Nothing is to be gained—indeed, a great deal is to be lost—by having Uncle Sam act as though world disaster and catastrophe are just around the corner.

BUILDING PROSPERITY

It is generally agreed that, of all the industries, housing offers the best opportunity to pull the country out of the depression. There is a vast deficit of homes, especially modern homes, as the result of a decade of under-building and increasing population. Remarkable progress has been made in building, design, beauty, convenience and comfort. People want good homes more than any other material thing.

There is said to be a prospect that residential building this year will reach a volume of $2,000,000,000. But that will fall far short of the potential demand. Experts say we could absorb several billion dollars' worth of homes every year for a decade.

The expected increase this year would be a gain of one-half over last year. It might be more, building men say, if the financing and construction were made easier. In some places now banks are beginning to waive the "service charge" for building loans, and that helps. It would help in many cities if some of the building trades' rules and superfluous requirements for installing plumbing, electric wiring, etc., were moderated along safe lines.

It might help most of all if the long-discussed idea of building trade wages based on continuous employment through the year could be made effective, giving the workmen more income per year and the owner more house for his money. One of these times some community will really try that method.

MORE OF OURSELVES!

One of the most exciting and inspiring motion picture productions of recent months was a one-reeler, sort of an incidental attraction whose cast included no luminous names, which was not exploited and was suddenly flashed upon the screen as a pleasant surprise.

It was entitled "The Declaration of Independence" and in it were Jefferson, Franklin, John Hancock, Hamilton and all of the famous delegates to that immortal convention in Philadelphia. It was in color and was as beautiful as it was stirring.

The audience reaction which it inspired should have produced an enlightening effect upon producers. Obviously, it was just what the public wished to see. Why should not American history, so rich in material and in admirable principles, provide the stories and the background of a greater number of American pictures?

We have in the past and we still draw heavily upon European history for our motion picture productions, but "The Declaration of Independence" reminds us that from the time of Columbus down to the exciting and baffling present we have been making a thrilling brand of history of our own.

In the lives of Washington and Jefferson, Boone and Crockett, Grant and Lincoln and the times through which they moved we have the fabric from which moving stories are woven and patriotism is stimulated. Why not have more of ourselves?

More than 60,000 residents of Tokyo live on barges that float up and down the Japanese capital's network of canals.

DALE HARRISON'S In Old New York

New York—The reading of books is not, I'm afraid, as widespread as it once was or as it ought to be. Too many other matters command attention. At least it has been that way with me. I have read no books to speak of in several years, mostly because I have believed myself too busy—which is a silly excuse for anyone—but also because I was afraid to risk being disappointed. My reading consequently was confined to books I KNEW were good—books that have lived, rather than new books which must yet be proved.

This cultural shortcoming would have been a sorry boomerang if other people took the same attitude because, after all, writing is my business and it would be a very cold winter if those who read contemporary writers should suddenly say to the devil with those fellows, and go back to Thoreau, Thackeray and Addison.

I have just finished a book though, that is certain to repay anyone its reading. It is Pierre van Paassen's "Days of Our Years," a February choice of the Book-of-the-Month Club. It is, I believe, a first book. Van Paassen, a European correspondent for several years, is a Hollander who has been a naturalized American for several years. "Days of Our Years" is an autobiography, but it spins the spell of a novel.

I am told that Van Paassen had no idea of writing a book until he found himself quite by chance chatting at a cocktail party with a publisher. Neither man knew the other, and the conversation rambled experimentally along until suddenly the publisher found himself fascinated by the casual expressions of opinion and the dramatic episodes which Van Paassen was relating.

"You should write things like that into a book," the publisher said.

Van Paassen shrugged his huge shoulders. "Some day, perhaps," he said, "but there are so many books and my life is hardly worth the telling. No publisher would be interested."

"There is a publisher interested already," the man said. "I am that publisher."

Before the party was over, Van Paassen had bound himself to write a book—a book I am very glad to have read.

You probably have wondered, as have I, how the professional book reviewers ever manage to read all the books about which they write so learnedly. The secret, it turns out, is that many book reviewers are not book readers. They develop a knack of skimming. One reviewer I know has an uncanny faculty of glancing only at the center of each page, snatching a few lines to the page. (I even suspect he skips some pages at that.) He swears that merely by reading these middle lines he is able to follow the story and to tell how well it is written.

This is no way to read a book, but on the other hand a book reviewer is working for wages and has so much work to do in so many hours.

Music critics in New York are confronted with much the same problem. They give thoughtful attention to major concerts—the symphony orchestras, the opera and the top flight artists; but they can not hope to do critical justice to the hundreds of younger musicians who give concerts—at their own expense—at Carnegie Hall or Town Hall with the hope that one of the critics may listen, be pleased, and write a review that will encourage them to go on.

The music-critics, or their assistants, simply do not have the time. Often it is necessary for them merely to bob into one hall for a number or two, then dash to some other hall to hear someone else. The very acrobatics of the situation militate against a thoughtful report of any of the artists.

Musicians, however, are stubborn geniuses. Though they fail to win praise and fame, they keep trying year after year. Music teachers will tell you that hundreds of men and women past 40 continue studying and practicing, never becoming convinced but what some day they will be acclaimed.

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington—Termination of the war probably will be welcomed throughout Spain, but in no place more than in Madrid.

Grover

way while artillery shells his overhead and machine gun bullets spatter on buildings within a few hundred yards of the downtown business district.

In places trenches are 15 feet apart—the distance across a room. Soldiers wearily curse each other back and forth. Radios on each side blast out propaganda designed to undermine the morale of the others.

The city population never has been united. Loyalist and Insurgent sympathizers have lived side by side through the long months of the bombardment. Trenches cut through western Madrid, with the insurgents holding a salient reaching deep into the city like a great tongue. All the fighting has been in the newer residential part but for a year or more neither side has been able to gain an inch.

Well constructed trenches have made surface gains impossible. The result has been attempts at undermining each other. In places there underground diggings have gone down 200 feet or more. Loyalist trenches are connected with the city sewer system, with lights, telephones and water.

The telephone system, American owned, has not been broken off between the Loyalist and Insurgent sections, although it is under strict military supervision. Those on one side can telephone across the trenches to exchange bitter words with the others.

All civilian-owned automobiles were commandeered for the army early in the war and only a few foreign owned ones are operated. Street cars and subways are loaded with passengers as a result.

"They hang on the roofs to get a ride," said one correspondent.

Those with permits can ride the trolleys within a three minutes' walk of the front line trenches, and walk the balance of the distance almost to the scene of fighting, but always under strict guard.

Children play at times in the cross streets, knowing from bitter experience which streets to avoid because bullets sail down them. The favorite Florida Hotel, at the head of the Grand Via, Madrid's principal street, for a long time was shelled daily because it was such a good target.

A few correspondents refused to leave a safe haven at night, but some points and count shells as they whistled over. One was asleep when a shell tore through the wall of his bedroom just over his pillow, ploughed through the opposite wall and exploded in the bathroom, wrecking all the plumbing. The reporter was unhurt.

The city for months has been stagnant. Picture shows are always filled, as are cafes during the early evening. There is nothing else to do. Everything is blacked out at night.

The city's business is all operated on a collective basis. Food is parcelled out. The population, regardless of sympathies, is reported completely bored with the war. Few now run for safety even to escape shelling. Hospitals are filled with civilian wounded, as well as soldier wounded.

There is no singing, although Madrid once was the merriest city in Europe. Police have preserved good order in the city. The mayor, formerly a boiler maker, has seen to that.

"He has made a good mayor," said a correspondent.

There has been a steady, although perhaps not extensive, desertion from one side to another, with constant spying. They are all Spaniards. A Loyalist Spaniard looks like an Insurgent Spaniard, although perhaps a Loyalist would be a little thinner, because of food scarcity.

The end of the war will bring retaliation against Loyalist leaders. Generalissimo Franco already has hinted that. Reports at the beginning of the war told of thousands of Insurgent sympathizers in Madrid killed or exiled when the war started. Correspondents expect thousands of Loyalist leaders to meet a like fate as the war ends. War, it seems, is Hell, even in sunny Spain.

WHO WANTS PROSPERITY IF THEY HAVE TO WORK FOR IT?

Under the CAPTIVE DOME

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison—Now that nearly two months have passed and his return from his European pleasure jaunt is expected soon, the capitol is beginning to speculate on Phil LaFollette's future.

Wyngaard

The answer is easy to furnish, LaFollette will return to Madison to set up a law office, and probably a successful law business, either independently, or by rejoining his old firm here. Although he will say that new leaders should take over the Progressive organization, that isn't going to be as simple as it will sound with the three-time governor present and available for advice and ideas.

Although he will get strong advice from the regular wheel horses in the party to abandon the National Progressives of America, which a lot of people seem to believe was strangled in its cradle last fall, that advice will be disregarded. However, it is quite likely that NPA will be shelved for a time, but only for expediency's sake. There never was any intention to run the new party ticket in 1940, and even 1944 was uncertain. The NPA was a long shot, maybe as long as 1948.

He will also be surprised to find that there have been some significant developments of sentiment within the party during his brief absence.

ROOSEVELT PROGRESSIVES

He will find, for example, many important party followers talking about Roosevelt for a third term, and about running for the Progressive delegates to the 1940 Democratic convention for that purpose. Potential leader of such a movement is W. T. Eyjue, who has quarreled with the LaFollettes frequently in times past.

If such a movement should develop, it may well mean a test for the LaFollette dominance over the party for the Roosevelt-Phil LaFollette alliance was definitely severed quite a while ago.

The Progressive party will present some interesting questions within the next few months and will be well worth watching.

In the meantime its present strategy on the Hill administration is interesting. Those who watch politics closely will have observed that the party leaders proper have been exceedingly quiet since Jan. 2. They say they are confident that nothing they can do or say could help build up public opinion better than the doings of the Hill government itself.

The Progressive leaders are smart politicians, baring landslides. They know that the problems Hill has to find solutions for are pretty stiff. They know too that a party freshly restored to power inevitably stirs up inter-party trouble. Let well enough alone, is their current motto.

There is some talk about a reorganization program in preparation for 1940, but little agreement on who should head such a project. John Reynolds is ready to quit the party chairmanship, while E. M. Rowlands is looking for a job in Washington. It is beginning to appear that the Progressives are at long last ready to bring some new faces into the limelight.

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

TESTIMONY ON SHORTAGE OF VITAMIN A

Herr Doctor W. Stahel pleads a strong case for the apocryphal hypovitaminosis, nutritional disturbance or disease due to insufficient vitamin A. In the Berlin Klinische Wochenschrift, Nov. 26, 1938, German medical writers have a way of hashing up scientific facts with sheer fancy or theory in a dish that is so very easy to eat but later gives you remorse. The earlier descriptions of the value and efficacy and freedom from untoward or dangerous effects of new nostrums emanating from Germany illustrate this trait. When a German doctor cures loose, even though you are a skeptic at the beginning, you had better look out. I think it only fair to mention this before we get any further in a dither about the still enigmatic role of vitamin A in human metabolism.

In women past the menopause a peculiar condition occurs along with some chronic arthritis, which has become known as Sjogren's syndrome. It is characterized by great dryness of all the mucous membranes from deficient secretion of the glands, particularly the tear glands and the salivary glands, the mucous glands in the upper respiratory tract, the sweat glands and the glands of the stomach. Due to these glandular weaknesses the patient suffers from dry eyes and chronic irritation or soreness of the eyes, dry mouth, chronic dry "catarrh" of nose, throat or bronchial tubes, difficulty in swallowing, impaired sense of smell, impaired sense of taste, deficient sweating, lack of gastric juice to digest food, general weakness, loss of appetite, lowered tolerance for carbohydrate, muscular atrophy, sometimes fever and anemia.

Right here, O' Doc Brady, who knows no more and no less than any one else about it, interposes the suggestion that lack of sufficient vitamin B complex in the daily intake is as likely to account for many of these conditions as is insufficient vitamin A. Take it or leave it. It is just my notion.

Anyway Herr Doctor Stahel believes the vitamin A content of the average diet is insufficient in these cases, and he describes one instance in a woman aged 64 years where the administration of 16,000 units of vitamin A as a supplement to the diet, daily for several months, brought about remarkable improvement. The inflammatory manifestations in all the mucous membranes subsided, the patient recovered normal sense of taste and smell, swallowing became easier, sweating returned, the chronic conjunctivitis and photophobia (abnormal sensitivity to bright light) disappeared and the general condition was much improved.

To the layman 16,000 units may sound like a lot of something. Really it is not so much. Remember, there are several millions (as nearly as I dare estimate, what with my terrible arithmetic) red corpuscles in a drop of blood.

There are 30,000 units of vitamin A in 31 ounces of dandelion greens; 1,000 units in a pint of fresh milk; 250 units in a banana; 600 units in 31 ounces of turnip greens; 3,000 units in a sweet potato; 20,000 units in 31 ounces of spinach; 500 units in the yolk of an egg.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Poor Man's Insulin

You may be interested in this observation. A patient of mine receiving two injections of insulin daily began taking the vitamin B complex you recommended. Within a few days he began to suffer from insulin shock (hypoglycemia) about an hour after each dose of insulin.

We had to cut down his insulin dosage to less than half of what he had been taking for two years. (—M. D.)

Answer—Thank you, Doctor. Probably there would be less obesity and less diabetes if the everyday food of the majority of people contained the vitamin B complex that grows in it. It has a monograph on Diabetes—readers who want it may send a three-cent-stamped addressed envelope and ask for it—no clipping, please.

Potassium Chloride
Long subject to headaches doctors ascribe to distended septum and pressure on or obstruction of sinus openings. This past winter have suffered constantly with swollen membranes, sneezing, running at nose. Read your article about potassium chloride, tried it (five grains dissolved in glass of water three or four times a day), and have obtained great relief. (M. W. S.)

Answer—Potassium chloride probably acts similarly to epinephrine (adrenalin). It seems to give considerable symptomatic relief in many of the annoying manifestations of allergy. Increased intake of calcium and vitamin D will generally prove beneficial in such cases. Send three-cent-stamped envelope bearing your address, and ask (for monograph on High Calcium Diet, Calcium Feeding, Vitamins Everybody Needs.

Goat's Milk
Is goat's milk better for a person with tuberculosis than cow's milk? Is it true that the best tuberculosis sanitariums use goat's milk preferably to cow's milk for feeding patients? (L. M.)

Answer—Goat's milk is at least as good for a tuberculosis patient or on any one else as cow's milk is. I know of no reason why it should be preferred to cow's milk, although I believe I do choose it. Goats are virtually immune to tuberculosis. Therefore the milk from a goat or a herd of goats is safer than the milk from a cow or a herd of cows, so far as the chance of carrying bovine tubercle bacilli to the consumer is concerned.

Strapless Swim Suits

Latest Beach Apparel

St. Petersburg, Fla. (By)—Beach style critics this winter have decided that about the last spare inch of material had been shorn from midday's bathing costume with removal of the shoulder straps.

In the place of the conventional straps, a contrivance of rubber elastic tape strung through the upper pleating holds up the top part of the suits. Wearers generally appear to be pleased with the strapless outfit, especially for sun bathing. No unsightly white line is left over each shoulder and the coat of suntan is general and even for display with evening clothes.

On the basis of early 1939 prices the sale of cream alone from one good dairy cow fed on home grown feeds, would bring a southern farmer as much money as a bale of cotton in a year's time.

Kaukauna Boxing Squad Wins First Match of Season

Defeats Neenah High School Team by 6 to 4 Margin

Kaukauna — Kaukauna High school boxers began their 1939 season auspiciously here last night with a 6 to 4 edge over Neenah. With the bouts tied at 4-all Bob Niesen and Sherman Powers out-pointed Benson and Speld of the Rockets to clinch matters. In an exhibition bout Don Reichelt, 112, of Kaukauna received the decision over Craddock, 115, of Neenah. Joseph Shields of Appleton was the referee. Coach Clifford H. Kemp presented Phil Zwick, Kaukauna's famous featherweight, before the bouts got under way.

William Mitchell, 85, a newcomer to the Kaw squad, got the home team off on the right foot with a decision over Winkelman who also scaled 85. Mitchell forced the battle from the start and took all three rounds. Gordon Hennes made it 2 to 0 by upcutting his way through Thompson's defense, knocking the Neenah lad down in the second round.

Schaffte of the visitors rang up their first victory by outpointing Jim Mayer, veteran Kaukauna boxer at 107. The rangier Neenah batter won the first and third rounds. Don Keil carried the fight all the way to Neenah's Gilbert Cloutier, finishing the last round with a rush to overcome a slight deficit in the earlier cantos.

Stocky Harold Bunker made it 2 for Neenah by rushing Paul Keil the first round, the Kaukauna boy having to retire at its end with a bad nose bleed. Chester Cloutier tied the matches at 3-all, shading Morris Summers in all three rounds.

B. Haag put the invaders out in front by outstaying Paul Feldt. Feldt sent Haag to the canvas twice in the first round but Haag's work in the last two earned him the decision. Cliff Femal, who last year managed the Lillcrap and pounded out an easy win. Femal scored the first clean knockdown in the first round, connecting with Lillcrap's chin to send the Rocket to the mat. Femal's guard was too much for Lillcrap to penetrate.

Bob Niesen, a Kaw who was undefeated last year, kept up his perfect record by trouncing Benson of Neenah. Niesen, at 162, spotted Benson 4 pounds, and earned the decision by his aggressiveness. Niesen sent Benson to the floor twice in the first round and had an easy margin to coast in on. The Powers-Speld bout was one of the closest of the night, with Powers having a shade the better of it the last two rounds after an even first. Powers weighed in at 172, with Speld tipping the scales at 176.

Third Candidate in Field for Kaukauna Election in April

Kaukauna — Abe Goldin became the third candidate to announce himself for the April city election yesterday, saying he would run for reelection as south side Justice of the Peace. The only others who have taken out papers are Barney J. Mithka and William Rickard for the north side justice office, of which the former is incumbent. Nomination papers must be filed by March 20. Lester J. Brenzel, city clerk, said yesterday. The earliest they may be filed is March 15. Candidates from the city at large require at least 64 signatures and 100 more than 115: First ward, at least 18 and not more than 29; Second ward, at least 16 and not more than 26; Third ward, at least 17 and not more than 27; Fourth ward, at least 15 and not more than 24; Fourth ward, at least 15. Last November was the first election in which the Third ward did not poll the most votes, the honor going to the First ward.

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

For every beauty problem there is a remedy.

Pluck the few rebellious hairs if they grow where they will not be missed. If you need them for shaping your eyebrow just clip off the curling up. During the day annoint them with vaseline and pinch them between your thumb and first finger in an even line.

If this does not make them truly apply wave set at night, and a bit more after washing your face in the morning, after darkening them.

Facial Hair
Facial hair may be bleached or removed by a harmless depilatory. For full directions and warnings about this problem send for Patricia Lindsay's leaflet on "Superficial Hair on the Face." Enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope.

Fingers Stained?
Take a good hand cream or lotion and rub it well into your hands before washing them in warm water and soap suds. While they are wet rub the stains with pumice stone. When hands have been dried rub them with a piece of lemon. At night cream the hands and wear a pair of loose cotton gloves to bed. There are also several good stain-bleaching powders on the market.

Dry Lips will not curl. Therefore you must keep your lips nicely lubricated with a reliable eyelash cream, olive or castor oil. Massage them with the lubricant each night and gently pull them in quick tugs to stimulate growth. When you apply make-up, again treat them with the lubricant and curl them with an eyelash curler. If they curl slightly without the curler then brush them upward every day with a good size eyelash brush. After they are curled you may darken the tips with a bit of mascara.

Rings Under Eyes
To some people, dark rings under the eyes are natural. When they appear on others it is usually nature's warning that rest and exercise is needed. If very pronounced you should have a physical examination by a thoroughly reliable physician.

To treat faint rings: Massage the eye gently with a good eye cream, or a pure cold cream. Olive oil is also good. At the end of the day, before going out in the evening, lie in a darkened room with medicated eye pads on. Or saturate fresh cotton pads with witch hazel. Before you apply make-up, pat on white rouge with your finger tip over the darkened skin. Then proceed with face powder and rouge in usual manner. Some women have good results with liquid powder over the white rouge.

Recipes for a hand-pack and stain-bleaching powder are available. Write me care of this paper. A self-addressed, 3-cent stamped envelope must accompany your request, otherwise these recipes cannot be sent to you.

Taken Out in Hearts; Wins With Lady Luck

BY ELY CULBERTSON

"My Dear Mr. Culbertson: I speak to you as one kibitzer to another because, after all, what is a bridge writer but a kibitzer with a pencil? You will, therefore, understand my language when I tell you that I saw a hand played the other night that entitles the declarer to a glorified niche in the hall of fame for lucky people. He should be at the Santa Anita race track or at Monte Carlo, or maybe he is doing just as well in the bridge club. Anyhow, just scrutinize the following package of horseshoes:

North dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

NORTH		EAST
♠ A 9 5 3	♥ A K 6	♠ K Q	♥ 10 8 4 2
♦ J 8 7 5 3	♣ J 8 7	♦ K 9 3	♣ Q J 10
♠ A 3	♥ 7 6	♠ 10 8 4 2	♥ 3
	♠ A Q 10 4 2	♥ K 8 7 5 3

"The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 spade	2 hearts	3 diamonds	3 hearts
4 spades	5 hearts	6 clubs	6 spades
7 spades	7 hearts	8 diamonds	8 spades

"Regarding the bidding: The first bit of luck came when North opened the bidding with that high class collection of junk. Any time I open the bidding with this type of hand at one spade the next player passes, my partner bids two clubs, and there I am with no place to go. But did that happen here? O, no! West intervened with three hearts and North could pass with a sigh of relief (and, incidentally, it was a very audible sigh, too).

"The next piece of luck that fell South's way was the opening lead. Normally a heart would be opened and thus declarer, with two entries to dummy, would be faced with the problem of how to play the hand. But did that happen here? Again, no! West dug up a spade lead. Dummy's only entry was wiped out in one fell swoop and declarer could play the hand in only one way. He had to discard the two losing spades on the ace of king and hearts and go after the trump suit. He had to find the king right and then hope he could guess the club situation.

"By the time declarer had drawn the trumps and was huddling over the club play I was pretty well steamed. No man had the right to get so many breaks in one hand. It may sound nasty, but I was hoping he'd guess wrong on the clubs. But not this lucky so-and-so. He led the nine of clubs. West played low, and East won with the ten. Declarer ruffed the spade return, without batting an eyelash, led the deuce of clubs, which was won by West's ace.

"That's the story, Mr. Culbertson. I realize I am biased, but I would like your opinion. How much luck and how much good play were concerned in the making of this contract?"

"B. H. L. Los Angeles."

I am afraid my embittered correspondent is not giving South his just dues. Granting that the bidding was very fortunate for North-South, and further granting that the opening lead did not leave South much choice in the play of the hand, nevertheless his guess of the club situation was not luck. The opening spade lead certainly indicated that East held the king-queen of spades. That being the case, West must hold the club ace for his free ride. Missing the Q J 10 of clubs, declarer's only hope of losing two tricks in the suit was to find the ace doubleton. Ergo, the play was correct technically with a bit of luck thrown in as a reward.

Smyrna (AP)—A reward equivalent to $250 is offered by a Swiss watch manufacturing concern for the discovery of the whereabouts of a silver watch.

Kemal later presented the watch to a German general and it is believed that on the latter's death his widow sold it to an American.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE HOME

Marie Schneider's Tested Recipes

While some people who find the indicator on their bathroom scales a bit too enthusiastic and who have trouble getting into last year's clothing are welcoming the lenten season as a good time to cut down on eating, the woman whose duty it is to satisfy the appetites of a hungry household will encounter a few difficulties in providing nourishing and palatable dishes without the aid of meat on the numerous meatless days in the next six weeks. The problem of arranging a well-balanced menu without meat is one not to be taken lightly, for if mother becomes lax and puts scrambled eggs or creamed tuna before the family too often, she will soon have a household of gluttons.

A little serious thought on the subject of meat substitutes will do wonders toward solving the problem. There are any number of delicious combinations possible with fish, cheese and eggs. Fish, of course, first comes to mind when considering foods for meatless main dishes, but vegetable combinations, macaroni and spaghetti with cheese and tomatoes, and many other similar dishes serve to take the place of meat without leaving a gaping hole in the menu.

Two lenten menus are given below, together with the recipes for the main dishes.

Creamed Shrimp and Mushrooms
Hot Rolls
Chocolate Tapioca
Jelly
Cookies

Baked Fish
Lemon Shrimp or Tartar Sauce
French Fried Potatoes
Tomato Salad
Apple Pie
Cheese

Spinach Ring
4 cups cooked spinach
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon dried onion
Tiny clove garlic
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 eggs
Drain spinach thoroughly, run through the food chopper. Melt the butter, add the onion and a little piece of garlic, minced fine. Cook gently until it begins to brown, add the flour, rub to a smooth paste and gradually add the milk. Cook stirring constantly until smooth and thick. Season with salt, and lemon juice. Add the beaten egg yolks, mix thoroughly and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into a very well buttered ring mold, set in a pan of hot water and bake 30 to 40 minutes, in a moderately slow oven. Loosen the spinach ring and turn out on a large serving plate. Fill the center with Creamed Shrimp and Mushrooms.

Baked Fish
Scale and clean fish. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Fill with stuffing given below, and sew opening together. Brush with melted butter. Dredge with flour. If of a lean variety, place a few strips of bacon over fish. Place in greased pan, put in hot oven 400 degrees F. and bake until flesh separates easily from the bone, allowing about 15 minutes for each pound of fish. Serve with parsley and lemon slices or with tartar sauce.

Stuffing for Baked Fish
1 1/2 cups fine dry bread crumbs
1-3 cup melted butter
1 teaspoon chopped onion
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
1 teaspoon salt
Mix bread crumbs, and butter, add onion and parsley, season with salt and mix well.

Case Records of a Psychologist
By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University

Every church member should read this Case Record several times, and then subject himself to a rigid self analysis. Remember what Christ said about those who place stumbling blocks in the road of young people? Then read Matthew 18:6.

CASE M-159: William A. aged 55, is president of a large Sunday school class.

"We decided to follow your advice and try to bring more young people into our church activities," he began.

"We sent for copies of your bulletin on HOW TO FORM AN ACQUAINTANCE CLUB, and laid plans for entertaining 200 young men and women each Sunday afternoon."

"We had excellent talent and enough experienced men and women in our Sunday school class, so that the success of the venture was well assured."

"We had tentatively announced the opening date, and found that we would have an overflow crowd. A little article was run in our local newspaper, and the response was wonderful."

"Fine young people wrote in or telephoned, saying they were grateful for a place to meet on Sunday afternoon and have a jolly good time in a good environment."

Club in Action
"We planned our program to run from 4:30 till 6:30 in the afternoon. We are a downtown church, surrounded by movies, dance halls, taverns and other commercialized amusement spots."

"We planned to have professional musical talent imported from outside. We invited one of the leading cartoonists on our city paper to give us a chalk talk. We had a slight change of plan."

"We planned to show a movie of an entertaining and humorous sort, but some of the old timers opposed the movies. And just as we had the whole six weeks' try-out program well organized, we met an unexpected opposition."

Whited Sepulchers
"It wasn't the taverns that opposed us, nor the movies nor the dance halls. It was our own clergyman. He is an old man who had first given us an O. K. on the project."

"Then one of his older parishioners became angry because we went ahead without consulting him, and he vetoed our plans. He had been jealous, anyway, of the rapid growth of our Sunday school program."

"Now we don't know what to do. If we don't recruit young people for the church of tomorrow, where will the church have any support a generation hence? It is especially irritating to have petty jealousies conflict with moral and social progress."

DIAGNOSIS:
Wherever there is action, there is likely to be friction. And it is an unfortunate truth that old age frequently makes people ultra-conservative and childishly jealous.

There is no inevitable reason why older people should not keep in touch with the current demands of the new age. By consumer surveys, a la the Gallup method, they could easily take soundings of popular sentiment in their business or church, but they are often too indolent and conceited to do so.

Wife Tells Why Husband's Mother Gets in Her Hair

BY DOROTHY DIX

Why are mothers-in-law so often secret enemies instead of the loving friends they should be? A group of women were discussing this question the other day and one of them said:

DOROTHY DIX

stale mother-in-law joke. Afterward I knew that it is eternally true.

"So filled with the determination to be a daughter to my mother-in-law, I imagine the shock I got when I found out that she was not adopting any more daughters and that she looked upon me not as an addition to the family circle, but as a scheming adventuress who had somehow broken into the fold and stolen its prize lamb. Never shall I forget her first kiss. Bur-r-r! There were icicles on it that still make me shiver."

"And then slowly the knowledge was borne in on me that it wasn't me individually that she resented. It was a woman. She didn't want Bill to marry. She wanted to keep him for herself. She couldn't bear the thought of not being first with him. She was filled with that terrible mother jealousy that is the cruellest and most devastating passion on earth."

"And I made another discovery. That was that she didn't think that I was good enough for Bill; but inasmuch as I had inveigled him into marrying me in some moment of mental irresponsibility on his part, the least that I could do was to be his humble slave, fetch and carry for him, wait on him hand and foot. Her big idea seemed to be that I should spend my days over the cook stove preparing feasts for my lord and master. That I was to yes-yes him when he spoke and be filled with joy when he condescended to show me any attention or consideration."

"Furthermore, I found out that she had two codes of conduct. One for her own children and quite another for her in-laws. She thought that her sons-in-law should work hard to support their wives and provide them with every comfort. That Mary and Sally and Sue should have pretty clothes and belong to clubs and go to parties and enjoy themselves. But she thought it her poor Bill's duty to toil so hard to support his wife and thought it a

"I'll tell you. It is because mothers nearly always resent their sons' wives. They don't want 'em at any price. Now, when I married Bill, I was so much in love with him that my affection overflowed over all his family, and particularly submerged his mother. I idealized and glorified her. I was on my knees with gratitude to her for all the suffering and labor she had gone through in rearing for me my priceless husband."

"I felt that she had given me the supreme gift and I was filled with righteous indignation at the way the comic strips and the jokesmiths caricatured mothers-in-law and held them up for ribald mirth. And I wondered how any one could laugh at the cause it is eternally true."

crime for me to waste his money on a servant and new frocks and good times."

"Then, of course, she felt she had a right to boss me and run my house because I was just a chit of a girl and she was an experienced housekeeper; because she 'couldn't' endure seeing Bill's money being wasted, and Bill's money being ruined by a bride's cooking. Maybe she was right at that, but most of us girls marry to get out from under our mother's thumbs, so we don't take it kindly when Mother-in-Law puts the pressure on us."

"I can laugh now, but I shed many a bitter tear over my mother-in-law always telling me just how SHE always did things, and asking me how much everything cost, and somehow outjockeying me in furnishing my house and filling it with big, heavy, clumsy furniture that would wear—worse luck!—instead of the smart modern pieces I craved and had planned to buy."

"Well, she is a lady and so am I, so we didn't literally get in each other's hair or have words. On the contrary, we have always been terribly polite to each other. But we have kept our claws sharpened and given each other many a dig, when we might have loved each other and been such good pals if only she hadn't made me feel such an unwelcome addition to the family circle—if only she had shown me a little of the affection and understanding she gives her own daughters."

"And it would have made Bill so much happier. When I think of the heartaches our undercover feud has given him I am filled with remorse and wish that I had taken my mother-in-law lying down, so to speak."

DANGEROUS SERVICE

by GRACE ELLIOTT TAYLOR

THE CHARACTERS
Peter Mallone: An adventurous Englishman.
Petronella: His loyal young sister.

Yesterday: Peter gets the coveted job with the London Daily News and will return to England. Aunt Maisie cables Petrel to come with him.

Chapter 12
Facts, Facts, Facts
Petronella received the cable on the following Monday. She was changing, after tennis. Peter was going to take her to the gym to dance. The "children's corner" would be collected there for Peter's farewell. Father was out. The rebellion kept him busy. Although he went on just the same in Rangoon, things were happening in the green villages, and agitators were spreading discontent in the bazaar.

She opened the envelope. She cried out. Aunt Maisie was ill! Fear gripped her. "Don't let Aunt Maisie die!" The next moment she read the cable through again. She began to realize other possibilities. She faced all the things this recall meant. For the wording did not state that she was very seriously ill. She would be able to go home! Father could not refuse! She was suddenly filled with prayerful thankfulness. Aunt Maisie would get better! She must! And she would forget her own unhappiness, in looking after her.

Petronella never wanted to endure suspense, like that of the last months, again. She had watched every post. Tony had not written. She had sent a subscription to Clara Horton, whose fund for White Russians, and the particulars of the camps she was establishing, were now receiving a good deal of publicity in the English papers. Very casually, she had mentioned that she had met Tony, and asked for news of him. Miss Horton had answered. She had not seen him since early December, when he had been very helpful to her. He had had fever, and was looking ill. She believed he must have left China, Petronella, and Peter, hurried to the train. The Daily News published no more of his articles. Had he returned to England? Or might he arrive suddenly, unexpectedly, in Rangoon, to explain.

But he had not come. The moment Peter entered the bungalow, she handed him the cable. Even though the news was sobering, he, too, gave a shout of wonder.

"You'll sail with me! Poor old Maisie," he added dutifully. "But perhaps she's all right."

"I think that, too. I do hope she is. I believe it is because I wrote to her."

His eyes met hers. "So we go together after all! That's the grand part of it!" Peter had walked to the window and leaned out.

"Yes, Peter, I shall leave leaving Burma, in some ways. I rather love it."

He dismissed the past, jerkily. "But it isn't our road."

To the west, the sky was aflame with sunset. The trees of Burma stood darkly etched against its glory.

"No, it isn't our road," she answered softly.

Father looked very lost, for a moment, when Peter told him the news. She felt sorry for him, and guilty, herself. He had done his best, as he understood it. It was not his fault, in his own anxiety for her future, that he had threatened her happiness. Perhaps, some day, she would see that she had been to blame more than she would now admit, for escaping in a way she was very fond of him. Or rather, she would have been, realized Petronella regretfully, had not the clash of their ideas continually illustrated the possibility of real friendship between them.

He took Maisie's cable and stared at it. There was no question, he agreed. Maisie had done a great deal for them both. It was Petrel's duty to go home, and look after her. And if there was anyone particularly fond of her, he hinted—well, that came home every few years, on leave.

Peter went to the telephone. He telephoned the shipping office, and reserved a second berth on the "Stirlind," sailing next Friday.

Very Sad

Standing side by side on deck on March 20, they looked back across the same brown water which had welcomed them to Burma five months back, to the same flat, round country on the skyline, the round oil dums, the little golden pagoda. The cheers of their riotous send off still rang in their ears. They were very sad.

"We've left a lot behind," said Peter.

"Youth," said Petrel, then felt rather melodramatic. He meant it. Hereafter, he would be young, but part of her mind and heart were old. He contradicted her. Girls talked and thought a lot of bunk, he said about their first love affair.

The East hadn't got him, after all, thought Peter, triumphantly. He had expected, at one time, that he was destined to spend most of his life there. He had escaped. Perhaps he would have escaped, anyway. But it might not have been so comfortable. But for this small staunch sister of his, he might have lost patience, waiting for the rebellion to

Towner Charges College Racket

Lawrence Admissions Chief Says Schools in Cut-Throat Competition

Milton C. Towner, director of admissions at Lawrence college, charged that "colleges are engaged in cut-throat competition in proselytizing students" at sessions of the American College Personnel association at Cleveland, Ohio, Thursday.

E. W. Hale, director of personnel at Lawrence college, saw in the proselytizing a "grave social implication" and said: "High pressure college representatives have urged students to go to colleges for which they are not fitted, with the result that many students have been unable to orient themselves."

Both educators said proselytizing of athletes is only one phase of the "scholarship racket" which principle motive is to keep up enrollment, they agreed.

High school principals have participated widely in the racket, Towner said.

To combat these scholarship practices an association of college representatives has been organized and has adopted a code for scholarship awards, Towner and Hale reported.

'What are You Giving Up?' Is Popular Query as Lent Opens

Neenah—What do you give up during lent is a question heard frequently these days among both Catholics and Protestants in Neenah and Menasha and brings a variety of answers. Aside from the religious significance of self-denial during the 40 days which is part and parcel of the various creeds, a Twin City physician also declares that people give up those things which they enjoy most. In many cases the things they enjoy most are the most harmful because of the tendency toward over-indulgence and acquisition of strong habits. It is because of this self-denial that person practicing it also benefits physically as well as spiritually.

Young people are denying themselves sweets, pie, cake, candy; are passing up motion pictures, dancing, parties where cards are played and many young men are giving up smoking.

Some persons are planning to omit all "lunching" during the lenten season, others to whom certain foods, such as butter, sugar, and cream are heaped on everything from bread to pie, are denying themselves those things because they like them the most.

Learn Self-Control
The meditations, prayer services, special masses and all church services that prepare Christians for the Easter festival began Wednesday of this week, but of equal significance is the self-denial program of individuals for by that denial and because of it they are learning self-control, exercise of will and meditating each day the spiritual reason for that denial.

Some churches have given self-denial boxes to parish members in to which members will put the equivalent in cash of what they are denying themselves. Many men are giving up liquor, beer, smoking, card playing and other amusements during the lenten season and women are staying away from bridge parties, foregoing dancing and special desserts and sweets.

As one pastor wrote in the bulletin to his congregation "anyone can let up and light up but it takes will power to let up and give up; it would be much healthier for us not to walk a mile for a cigaret but walk that mile without a cigaret. Motion pictures do not always make the best entertainment."

Chicago Pastor to Speak at Last of Safety Meetings

Dr. Preston Bradley Will Lecture at Menasha High
Auditorium Tuesday

Menasha — Dr. Preston Bradley, pastor of the Peoples church of Chicago and nationally known radio commentator, author and lecturer, will lecture on "Attitude on Safety Promotion" at the fourth and final of the series of safety meetings for Twin City employees next Tuesday night at the Menasha High school auditorium. The safety meetings, which alternate between Neenah and Menasha, are sponsored by the schools of adult and vocational education in Neenah and Menasha in cooperation with the industries of the Twin Cities.

Dr. Bradley has selected his subject as adapted for presentation to the employees of industry. Because of his years of study and experience in the field of sociology he is ready to present a program both entertaining and educational.

The speaker is considered one of the most forceful and entertaining public speakers of the present time. Along with his duties as pastor of the Peoples church, he has found time to write and publish three books. They

Lawrence Theater Director Picks Chodorov's 'Kind Lady' For Production at College

"KIND LADY," by Chodorov, a dramatization of Hugh Walpole's story, "The Silver Mask," has been chosen by F. Theodore Cloak, director, as the next Lawrence college play. It will be presented March 20 and 21 at Lawrence Memorial chapel.

In choosing the play the director was influenced by several considerations—its value as a play, how it fits in with the season of plays, the possibility of finding a cast in the college that could play the parts adequately and popular appeal. "Kind Lady" met all the specifications.

What was needed to round out the season was a compact play with a small cast, as the other three plays this year have had or will have large casts. The first, "Excursion," presenting a realistic slice of life and a cross-section of social structure, had a large cast, and "Dot," revival of a nineteenth century favorite, was a spectacle, also with a fairly large cast. "Utopia Limited," the last play of the year, will be a Gilbert and Sullivan opera.

"Kind Lady," a compact play with a small cast, heavier as far as its mood and atmosphere is concerned, filled the requirement. The story is thrilling and exciting, with plenty of tension and suspense without being gruesome.

The roles are difficult, but Mr. Cloak feels sure that he can find the right people to interpret the characters.

"We've built up a good tradition of acting excellence in the college theater," he says. "In the first two plays this year 53 different people have taken parts. From these, and from the new material which shows up at every try-out, a good cast is sure."

The play should have popular appeal, because it is modern and has a mystery and crook element. It opens a challenge because it involves around the gradual breaking down of an English lady's will by a band of crooks who move in on her and take possession of her house. There is no brutality, it is wholly psychological. The handling must be delicate and the directing subtle, a problem which appeals to Mr. Cloak.

"Kind Lady" is one of many plays Mr. Cloak has been wanting to produce. Others he has been thinking of when he chose it were "The Murder in the Cathedral," by T. S. Eliot, "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," three 1-act plays by Noel Coward, "Tonight at 8:30," and "The King's Jewry," a play about the expulsion of the Jews from England in the fifteenth century.

"There are always dozens of plays in a director's mind, things he has never had a chance to produce for one reason or another," Mr. Cloak says. "Either he hasn't had the staging facilities or the proper actors or something else. Some day all the elements will be right, and bingo! he gets that one off his chest. New plays appear every year, are produced on Broadway and are published. You can't tell entirely from having seen a play whether you want to do it or not—you have to read it and see whether the play is suitable, for example, to your community."

CLOAK SELECTS NEXT COLLEGE THEATER PLAY

Junior Play Centers Around Christopher Bean's Paintings

PENETRATING comedy with a touch of the whimsical is in store for the "first-nighters" of Appleton who will attend the junior class production of Appleton high school, "The Late Christopher Bean" by Sidney Howard, presented tonight in the high school auditorium. This is the first full-length drama to be given on the new stage, which has already gained the reputation of being the finest in the state. Miss Kathryn Fralish, speech instructor, is the director.

The central character of this New England comedy is Abby, the maid of the Haggitt family. As the plot develops the character of Abby grows in importance until finally she gains full stature at the climax. The story centers around the paintings of the late Christopher Bean, which suddenly are discovered to be very valuable. In the mad scramble that follows Abby alone maintains her native poise and dignity, for to her Chris Bean remains an unmercenary memory of distant happiness. Mary Ellen Notaras interprets the character.

Tom Nolan is the simple Dr. Haggitt. Goaded on by his social climbing wife, even he loses his sense of values temporarily. Ardyse Peters is Mrs. Haggitt. Fearful lest her two daughters remain spinsters, Mrs. Haggitt is especially anxious to find a suitable mate for Ada, the 25-year old girl who still fancies her baby ways. She has no worries for Susan, however; for Warren Creaner, the paper hanger with ambitions to be an artist, has announced his "intentions" over her protests. Ada is played by Mary Brandenburg; Susan, by Bertha Smyreous; Creaner, by Donald Bohl.

Three New Yorkers are largely responsible for upsetting the tranquility of the Haggitt home. David Bliss has the role of Tallant, a suave and unscrupulous art dealer; Donald Smith, that of Rosen, the scheming exhibitor; and Bill Mulen, that of Davenport, the portly, cultured art critic.

All the action of the play takes place in the dining room of the Haggitt home during the course of a single day. In that eventful period of less than nine hours Susan decides to elope, Dr. Haggitt secures and loses great wealth, and Abby is revealed as a new personality. Tickets for the performance may be secured at Belling's drug store or at the door. All seats except those in the upper balcony are reserved.

75 Women Hear Hygienist in Lecture at 'Y'

GOOD laws, proper facilities for medication a red blooded recreational program and effective social hygiene education were listed by Miss Almee Zillmer, lecturer for the Wisconsin State Board of Health, as essentials for an adequate social hygiene program when she spoke last night at the Y. M. C. A.

About 75 women heard her lecture on "What Wisconsin is Doing About Social Disease, and How You Can Help." It was given under the auspices of the Appleton branch of the auxiliary to the junior chamber of commerce, whose state project is the eradication of syphilis. "It's one thing to draw up a good program of attack on venereal diseases, and it's another thing to make it work," declared Miss Zillmer, who has been discussing the subject all through the state for more than 10 years. "It remains a paper program unless the general public is well enough informed to carry it out. Educating the public to accept a plan of attack on syphilis seems the long way, but it is the only sure way of wiping the disease out."

Wisconsin ranks among the more successful states in its handling of syphilis, Miss Zillmer declared. She attributed much of its progress to excellent health and social laws on venereal diseases.

Community Law "But laws are only as effective as their acceptance and execution," she continued. "And many a community, and Appleton is probably no exception, is lax in enforcing laws that would reduce venereal diseases. I think this is not approval of vice conditions but rather a feeling of hopelessness—more hopelessness than embarrassment."

The well-trained doctor, of course, is the center of the picture when it comes to disease, but Miss Zillmer reminded her audience that the doctor can treat only the cases that come to him.

Reiterating that no program can succeed unless it is understood and accepted by the public, Miss Zillmer said that Americans can't be pushed into things but they can be led through conviction.

Miss Zillmer concluded her talk by giving the mothers in her audience some helpful book references for the guidance of their young. Before the lecture Miss Zillmer was a guest at a dinner given at the Candle Glow Tea room by members of the auxiliary committee in charge of the program.

Naval Maneuvers in West Indies Secret

Miami, Fla. (AP)—Developments in the supposedly "zero hour" phase of the naval war games testing America's defenses against an attack in the vital West Indies area remained a closely-guarded secret today as President Roosevelt's flagship swung away from the Virgin Islands.

Whether a decisive "battle" in the three weeks of maneuvers by "white" and "black" fleets had been fought was a question officials apparently were not prepared as yet to confirm.

Hurst Defeats Former Golden Gloves Champ In Feature Fight

FIGHT RESULTS

F. Lamers (SJ) drew with Sray (SN), three rounds.

C. Hurst (SJ) beat Bradley (SN), three rounds.
Hare (SN) beat Mollen (SJ), three rounds.
A. Huisman (SJ) drew with McDaniel (SN), three rounds.
Kub (SN) beat W. McCabe (SJ), three rounds.

LITTLE CHUTE—St. John High school boxing team dropped a match to St. Norbert High of DePere winning five fights and losing six. Four of the Dutchmen regulars were left out because of no opponents, including Kenny Hurst, Quint De Bruin, Tony Simons and Gordy Hermesen.

The bouts were close all the way with each squad having five wins apiece up to the final bout.

The big surprise of the evening had Cletus Hurst defeating Jim Bradley, last year's winner of the Golden Gloves tournament, who also appeared in St. Norbert college exhibition bouts in the 130-pound class.

Bradley was a clever boxer, picking up points on fast punches, until Hurst forced him into a corner and battered his opponent unmercifully to the body. Bradley tried hard to keep Hurst at arms length but the local Dutchman took all but Bradley and never flinched to beat Bradley in a crushing, savage attack against the ropes or in a corner.

Battle Royal
Stan Versteegen and Hall staged a battle royal for three rounds and a little more than that as they kept on going in the second round after the bell sounded with Referee Ole Jorgensen tugging them apart. The final round had Versteegen still punching to win the fight.

Another thriller saw Kolb and McCabe slugging it out for three rounds with Kolb gaining on body blows at close quarters. Kolb gained an edge with a two fist attack to win in the final round by 1 point. This was the deciding fight which gave St. Norbert a victory.

Al Huisman staged a great fight against McDaniel in the 146 pound class. Huisman tied the opening round, won the second on a knockdown and lost the last to gain a draw.

Pudgy Lamers and Sray ended their bout in a draw, with Lamers taking the first round, Sray the second by a narrow margin and the third ended in a dead lock.

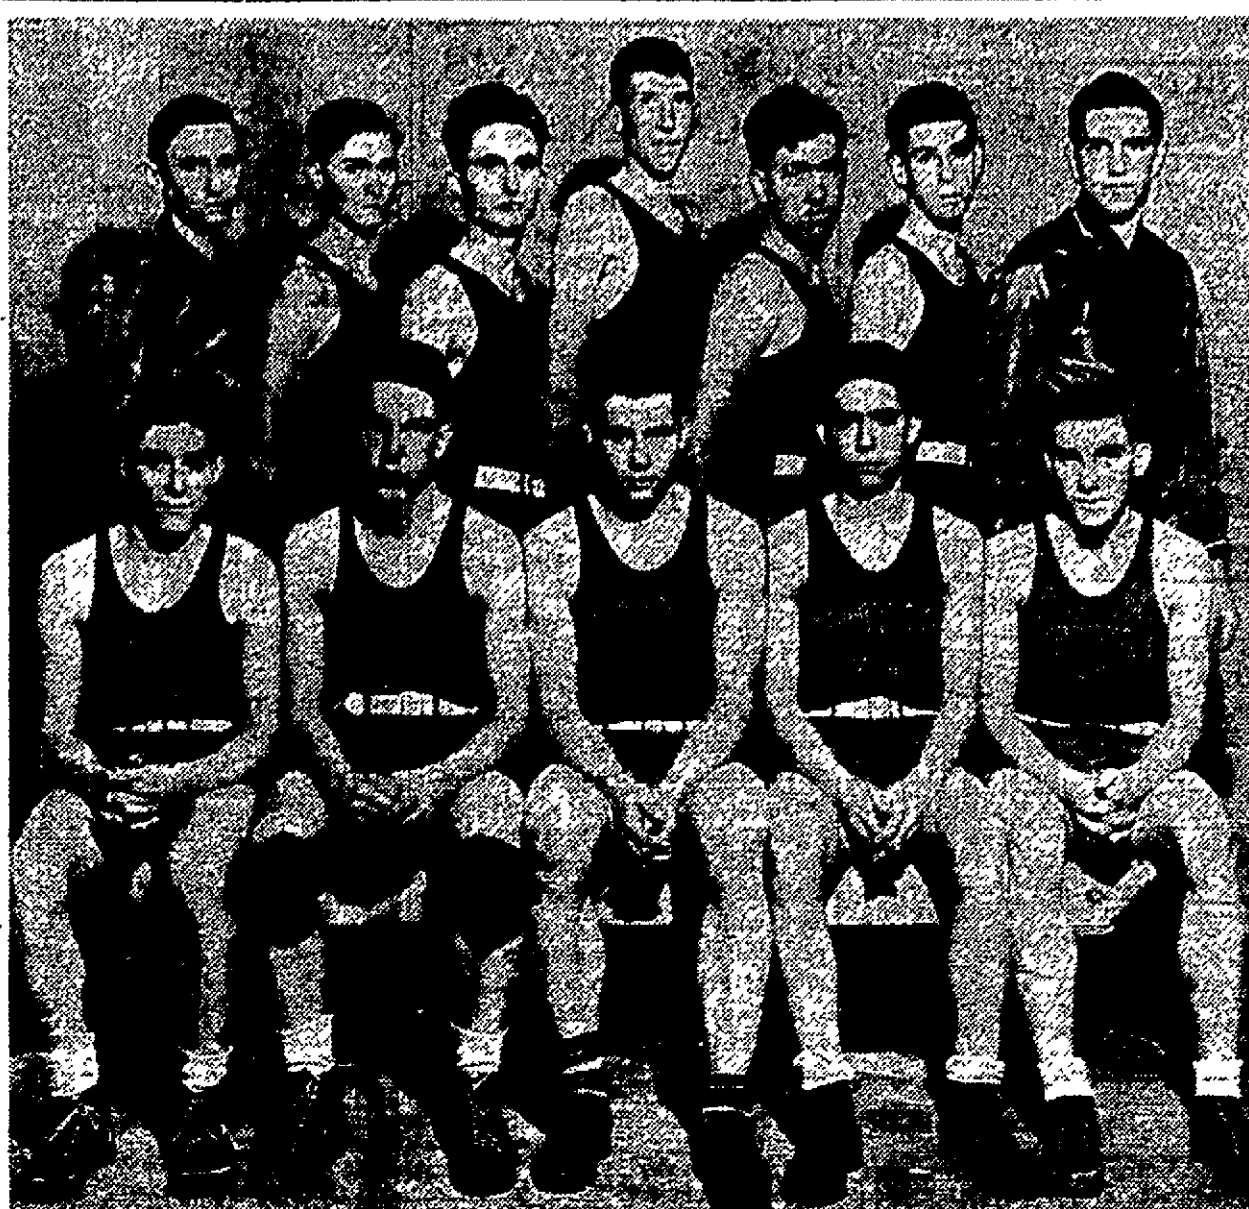

Buckwheel Versteegen and Shea gave a great exhibition never wasting many punches and showing clever footwork. After evading each other's punches in the first round Versteegen landed his punches on Shea and Shea tried to counter with a series of punches to the head.

Kimberly Boys Meet
Two lads who live in Kimberly staged a real fight. Billy Van Zeeland a freshman at St. John, and Knepkins who attends St. Norbert, went the limit with Knepkins having more power in his punches than Van Zeeland slid them off his shoulder or elbow to counter to his opponents face. Van Zeeland won by a half point.

Another close battle had Jim Hermesen losing to Lancell by a point. Hermesen was a bit short in reach but made up for it by charging in to connect on body punches. Lancell was content to pick up points on a left hand punch to Hermesen's face and ended with a win.

Caldwell had Erv De Bruin go as the result of playing tag on his nose in the first round and continued to pluck away in the second and third with a deadly left. De Bruin had a feeble defense against his shorter opponent, and stopped some smashing blows to the face, although De Bruin stayed with his opponent.

Emercy Mollen dropped all three rounds to a St. Norbert opponent who had Mollen practically licked in the first round, but Mollen came back to stick his left into Hare's face and stop his rushes.

Badgers Hope to Upset Ohio State

10,000 to See Buckeyes Meet U. of W. at Madison Saturday Night

Madison (AP)—On the basis of current Big Ten Standings Ohio State should be strongly favored to defeat Wisconsin in their basketball game here tomorrow night, but Badger supporters are hopeful of an upset.

Ohio State ranks second in the conference with seven wins and two defeats. Wisconsin is down in second division, having lost six and won three. However, Wisconsin is always hard to beat at home.

It will be the first and only clash of the season between the teams. A crowd of around 10,000 was expected.

This sports highlight will be sandwiched between tonight's boxing match featuring Wisconsin versus West Virginia and Monday night's Wisconsin-Minnesota cage classic.

Coach Harold Foster probably will use his usual starting lineup, consisting of Andy Smith and Dave Dupece, forwards. Byron Bell, center, and Bob Weigandt and John Rundell, guards.

The Buckeyes are expected to start with Jim Hull and John Schick, forwards. Bill Sattler, center, and Lynch and Boughner, guards. Hull is second high scorer in the conference.

Loss of Deneen Is Blow to M. U.

High-Scoring Forward Sick on Eve of Big Game With Notre Dame

Milwaukee (AP)—Marquette's hopes for making history by defeating Notre Dame twice in one basketball season were deflated today when Bobby Deneen, high-scoring junior forward, was confined with influenza.

The Harvard, Ill., youth had scored 172 points in 16 games to pace the team. He was expected to be a main cog in the Hilltop's offensive against Notre Dame at the auditorium tomorrow night.

"That's the worst sort of a break," Coach Bill Chandler said. "We've found before we can't break into our first string five, and still expect to win from a major opponent. The fact that Bobby is key man in our scoring makes it doubly bad."

Bill McDonald, spring Valley, Ill., sophomore who sank two timely baskets as Marquette defeated Michigan State Monday night, is a good bet to start in Deneen's place. Gil Thomsen, Kenosha sophomore, tops the available reserves.

Barring post-season games, three Marquette regulars will conclude their varsity careers against the Irish. They are Edwin Graf of Elgin, Ill., center. Dave Quibus of Milwaukee, guard, and Glen Adams of Carpentersville, Ill., forward. All are survivors of the Marquette freshman team of 1936 which won the Wisconsin A.A.U. championship.

Somebody on the Cleveland ball club is missing signals. . . . Jeff Heath, who was paid $3,500 for hitting almost 350 last year, was sent a new contract calling for more dough, but not anything like the $12,500 Heath was demanding. ## Rock Caves and a Temple

In South-Central India is a village known as Ajanta, and it is famed because more than two dozen "rock caves" were discovered near it in 1817. It has been learned that some of the caves were in use more than 2,000 years ago.

The caves were cut by men in the face of a steep cliff alongside a small river. They were made for a monastery school which kept growing during a period of eight or nine centuries.

Some of the caves were dwellings for monks and students, and contain rooms about 30 feet wide and 35 feet long. Leading from the large rooms are smaller ones which were employed as sleeping chambers.

Other caves were meeting places for students and teachers. The walls of most of the caves are covered with paintings in several colors. These paintings give us a good idea of art work in ancient India. Statues of the Buddha were found in the caves, and this proves that the school was run by Buddhists during much, if not all, of its history. Perhaps the school was closed because the people of India turned away from the Buddhist faith and back to the older Hindu religion.

At Ellora, in another part of south-central India, a tourist may see even more famous sights. Thirty-four large rock-caves were cut in the side of a hill. The caves seem to have been used as temples, five of them by Jains, 12 by Buddhists and 17 by Hindus.

Largest of all the works at this place is the mighty Kailas temple. It was made in honor of Siva, a Hindu god. Of all the works of man, the Kailas temple stands out as one of the most amazing. It dates back 1,200 years, to the reign of King Krishna I. Before it could be produced, men had to cut down through solid granite. By slow, hard labor they hollowed out a great space, leaving a central mass of rock.

The mass of rock was later hewn into a temple, a work of beauty. On the outside it is 109 feet wide and 164 feet long.

The temple is 90 feet high, about the height of one of our eight-story office buildings. Much of the rock inside of the temple was cut away and rooms 17 feet high were formed. The inside walls were plastered over and painted.

In the great courtyard are ponds, obelisks and sphinxes. In some places the temple was hollowed out, there are huge statues of elephants. These statues take the place of pillars; the heads of the elephants face the courtyards, and the elephants hold the ceiling on their backs!

Its People and Products

By Jimmie Fidler

Hollywood—With the League of Decency indorsing the New York State censors' ban against "Yes, My Darling Daughter," Hollywood is doing its best to "dare-they" nip-ups. Somehow, I find it a bit difficult to share the general indignation.

In making that picture, with its flippant, approving treatment of "trial marriage," the Warner Brothers knew they were flouting with dynamite.

Censorship—whether Hollywood likes it or not—is a fact, not a theory, and censor boards have a habit of reflecting the average, adult American's disapproval of anything which violates our established moral code. I believe Warner Brothers dared the censors for just one reason—if they could squeeze that picture through, its sensational angles would bring curious adolescents to the box-office in swarms. In other words, they tried to "get away with something"—and got caught. In this case, I must admit that if I had a sixteen or seventeen-year-old daughter, I'd send the censors a wire of congratulations and thanks.

It seems to me that the other producers who are shouting their indignation about "what the censors have done to Warner Brothers" might better be indignant about "what Warner Brothers have done to the censors." It's exactly such pictures as this one that put John and Jane Public squarely behind the "you-mustn't-do-it" bodies. Hollywood is still on trial for its morality and the only way to get an acquittal is to quit giving cause for offense.

CUFF NOTES: Next attack to be launched by the movie moguls in that anti-radio war will be directed against the Gulf Oil-Screen Actors' Guild program. It depends almost entirely on star names. Sully Elster, who had planned a snow-vacation, is doing a two-weeks loll on the desert-doctor's orders. Time out for Helen Mack—she suffered a severe back injury while posing for still pictures. Draw a pair of hearts entwined, round the names of Virginia Field and Howard Sharpe, magazine scribe—they're serious. Those thirty-five zoo-conditioned camels rented for "Beau Geste" are delaying things by refusing to work—they don't like the desert sand. It's a scandal for Edith Fellows in the famous "Little Pepper" stories—first one scheduled is "Five Little Peppers and how They Grew." Don't be surprised if wedding bells chime for Michael Whalen and Kay Whitehead, local socialites. Real reason Joan Blondell mixed that preferred Belle Watling role was her unwillingness to take fifth billing. Irene Dunne and Dr. Frank Griffin will auto-trek to Sea Island, Georgia, for a fortnight's vacation on completion of her current role. The George O'Brien are sliding close to home—the stock is flapping its wing that close. Party of the week: the Tahitian luau given by Jon Hall and Frances Langford to celebrate the completion of their South Seas playroom. Add sizzling twosomes: Susanne Paley, ex-Carroll lovely, and Stanley Hughes, Universal leading man.

Freddie Bartholomew's new-made Americanism has apparently reached the fever pitch. Having assured himself of citizenship by persuading his legal guardian, Aunt Clara, to file for naturalization, and pled with her until she consented to his enrollment for next summer's course at Culver Military Academy, he then cast a severe eye on the rest of the household. The one fly in his ointment was his Oxfordian tutor, John Cooper—hired by the studio to protect Freddie from his flat for American slang. Last week Cooper took out his first papers, and make no mistake about the reason. As Freddie rather inebriantly puts it, "I told him either or else!"

BELLS AND NO BELLS: Best picture of the week is "The Little Princess," highlighted by splendid color photography and outstanding performances by Shirley Temple, Arthur Treacher and Sybil Jason. No-bells to Deanna Durbin for the tantrums that have everyone on her lot wondering. A caution to Marlene Dietrich for proudly flaunting her "teen-age daughter" in a town where it's seldom done. A cheer for Nelson Eddy's grand performance in "Let Freedom Ring" and a lusty boo to the local trade paper which insists on making saccharine cracks about unending stars—they're not funny.

DANGEROUS SERVICE

by GRACE ELLIOTT TAYLOR

break. He had very nearly taken that job up in the oil fields; he had played, seriously, with the idea of working his way to Sydney. He was damn glad he had waited.

They received a cable from Aunt Maisie as soon as they were at sea. It cheered them. "Very much better. But continue journey. Love, Maisie."

"I wonder?" smiled Petronella. She looked at Peter. "I did write miserable letters," he guffawed in sudden delight. "Good old Maisie! Wonderful old Maisie!"

They found her in excellent health. Petronella hugged her in gratitude. The truth was never fully confessed. They would have been disloyal to their father. But Aunt Maisie did not contradict their obvious conclusion.

James came in to dinner their first evening at home. He had grown an annoyingly small fair moustache. His ears were very red, as he shook both Petronella's hands in his.

Since it was a very special occasion, Aunt Maisie lit candles, for dinner. James looked off at Petronella. He was puzzled. She had changed, he thought. But she was quieter. She smoked. Was she the same, in essentials? He was afraid her quality must be impaired. Reading her letters, he had told himself that was what must be happening. She was out all the time. She was being spoilt.

But if this was so, why was he coming gradually to the conclusion that, even if she did need taking down a peg or two, he no longer knew how to set about it? He had imagined himself performing the disciplinary service for her, then re-admitting her into his grudging approval. But the change had removed her from him. Where there had been absolute frankness, there was now reserve in her eyes. Or was it sadness? Didn't it concern him at all? "Some man!" he thought, and felt a quail of resentful jealousy.

Outwardly they were all very noisy, happy, and excited.

"As if you had been in prison, instead of having the time of your lives," remarked Maisie, crisply. "It is such heaven to be back," sighed Petronella. "I nearly went crazy, when I first saw the white cliffs, and the little green fields."

The following Monday, Peter went to town, saw Rowdon, and called up to tell them that he had started work. He was a reporter on the staff of the Daily News. He rented a divan room in South Kensington, only slightly larger than that which he had occupied during his car-selling interlude. For a month Petronella felt it best to remain at home, on the "Forest House," amid its awakening trees.

Peter must make his start alone. Aunt Maisie's mythical illness was good reason for delaying the secular training she had decided to take.

She went, therefore, to several local dances, with James. She golfed with him at Handcross, and Haywards Heath. She rode. She walked alone. She read the Daily News, where reports were once again headed "The Anthony Lance, our Special Correspondent in Shanghai."

Peter came home for brief, snatched week-ends. He looked thin. He told them, "It's a hard life, but I think it suits me. At least I hope it will, when I've got the hang of it. At present I get thoroughly bawled out." Peter could not help noticing that he talked much too fast, that one subject had not the power to hold his attention for more than a few minutes, before he rushed on to something else. He was nervously over excited, she realized. London, on the verge of the depression, was a strained city, and he had caught the feeling of tension.

Aunt Maisie arranged for Peter to start work at the "West End School of Commerce" at the beginning of the summer term. "You'd better live in town, during the week, and look after Peter," she told her. "I've been thinking, it's too far for you to travel up and down. He's not getting proper meals. A little apartment for the two of you, with a sensible woman to come in for an hour or so in the morning, will be a very sound scheme. I'll allow you thirty shillings a week, and you must tell me if it isn't enough."

Petronella was grateful, and delighted. "But Auntie, darling, why should you?"

Peter was gladder than he admitted at the prospect of his sister's companionship. When he made mistakes, which he seemed to do frequently, in his new work, he exaggerated their importance. Journalism was the one thing in which he wanted to excel. But keenness did not save him, apparently, from blundering. He had a great deal to learn. His imagination increased the heinousness of his errors, till he was often afraid that he was a failure. When Jodson smote his desk with his fist and shouted, "This isn't a report, it's libelous rubbish. You'll never be any damn good to me, Mallone, until you learn to observe impersonally, until you get me the facts, facts, FACTS!"

Peter told Petronella, "I had a nightmare last night. Jodson was sitting on my chest, thumping my ribs and yelling, 'Give me, facts, facts, FACTS.'"
